Selectmen reject center proposal, seek new plans

by Arlene Surprenant

Approximately 25 residents showed up to hear the board of selectmen's decision for or against the state Dept. Public Works' proposal to replace the Burlington Avenue Bridge and re-route traffic via a bypass around town center.

Though the discussion Monday night began quietly enough, at times it was reduced to shouting matches, accusations of using the project as a "political football," and a rehash of the March 30 DPW public hearing. In the end, selectmen rejected the plan with the understanding the town be allowed six months to conduct a feasibility study and come up with a counter proposal more in keeping with citizens' wishes.

The redevelopment authority has been granted $17,500 by EOCD to carry out the study and will match the figure with $12,500 of its own funds. The feasibility study, which would look at such things as traffic impact and flow, relocation of businesses, and a possible plan for a new town center, seemed to be the only hope for some much needed answers to questions raised by local home and business owners alike.

In an impassioned speech Jay Donovan, chairman of the WRA, told those present that if certain state representatives hadn't intervened, the study would now be complete and his board wouldn't be "totally frustrated by this whole process." He accused these individuals of making the project into a "political football" and trying to defeat the proposal, which had apparently been discussed and approved at a public hearing eight or nine years ago. He was backed in his feelings by businessman Bill Doyle, Anne Linehan, and some members of the board of selectmen.

"All we keep doing is taking chips out of one another and that's a lousy, rotten attitude for this town to have...They used us and this board has been abused by one or two individuals," charged selectmen chairman Rocco DePasquale. Earlier, Depasquale explained that though his board had asked the state to delay the hearing until the study was made, they were told any delay would jeopardize the entire project.

Each selectman, in turn, had a chance to air his views on the proposal. Most said a new bridge was necessary and some form of relief was needed for traffic congestion in town. However, Dan Ballou held out for creating a grade crossing where the present bridge stands. He also claimed the state's plan didn't address the enhancement of town center, something he considered top priority "to give our town a little more class."

"This board is being forced to have it (the project) shoved down our throats and make a decision right now," Ballou contended.

Bob Cain voiced strong support for the proposal, which dates back to the early start option plan of his father. He maintained traffic congestion "will never be relieved" if the project is turned down. He pointed out selectmen are taking steps to widen the road in front of Wilmington Plaza and both plans could alleviate some of the town's traffic woes.

Like Ballou, Jim Stewart felt the state is forcing the town's hand. He told those present the state is saying "you can have the feasibility study after you say yes to the project. It doesn't make a heck of a lot of sense to me," he added.

Selectmen were sympathetic to the concerns of those who would be most affected by the plan. Bob Doucette explained town center businessmen are already being negatively impacted by the project, especially through the loss of rental income. Beauty parlor owner Denise Gentile was most outspoken on the issue.

"We've got this hanging over our heads; we can't do a damn thing

Damaged mail was spread out to dry at the Wilmington Post Office.

Mail box fire at Plaza

A mailbox fire at Wilmington Plaza Tuesday afternoon damaged several hundred pieces of mail, including some income tax returns.

The fire was reported just before 4 p.m., when it was to be picked up. It had last been picked up the previous afternoon.

Postal officials said that no mail was totally destroyed, but that some pieces were partially burned. Most of the mail was damaged by water.

Mail which was not badly damaged is being dried and sent on its way. The more severely damaged mail is being listed, and then returned to the sender.

Unless the mail is returned, the sender can assume that it went through, with a one day delay, said postal officials.

Is committee official?

by Arlene Surprenant

A letter alleging that the Wilmington Fourth of July Committee is a governmental body and, thus, subject to the Open Meeting Law was the subject of discussion at Monday's selectmen meeting.

Residents Ken Palm and Gerald O'Reilly had sent a letter February 4 requesting the District Attorney's office to check into their claim. As a result, Assistant D.A. Michael Fabbri asked Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski to answer a list of questions covering such things as the appointment of committee members, financial and other records, and committee's purpose to help him with his ruling.

Board chairman Rocco DePasquale said selectmen would only address one question: Is the Fourth of July Committee a committee of the town of Wilmington?

"No way, shape, or form," answered Jack Cushing, long time chairman of the Fourth of July organization. He said the members were all volunteers and his committee was not attached to town government.

"We really are tired of this whole situation," Cushing explained, referring to neighbors' complaints against his board dating back to last summer when action was taken to move the carnival from the high school parking lot.

Noting that neither Palm nor O'Reilly were present Monday, Cushing told the Town Crier, "I really don't like it. If you're going to make accusations, at least have the decency to face us." He said neither man had confronted his committee nor came to their meetings, which are held on the first Wednesday of each month and open to the public.

Cushing added, "we, as a board, feel it's tough to keep volunteering your time when you have to keep going through sessions like this."

Jim Stewart, a member of both boards, expressed disappointment that Palm and O'Reilly didn't make an appearance at Monday's meeting to "enlighten us" about their intentions in taking this action.

Selectman Bob Cain praised the Fourth of July Committee for their continued efforts in behalf of the town residents.

Town Counsel Alan Altman will offer his own opinion on the questions raised in the letter. Stapczynski said he had already drafted a reply to Fabbri.

Election Saturday

Saturday is election day in Wilmington. The polls will be open at the Town Hall and the Wildwood School from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Voters will be electing two selectmen, three school committee members, the moderator, a member of the housing authority and a redevelopment authority member.

The school committee contests have confused many people.

There are three seats up for election, two three- year terms, and one two-year term, which will fill the unexpired term of the late Mitchell Spiris.

Running for the three-year seats are incumbent Bridget Zukas, former school committee member Jim Demos, Andrea Paglia and Joanne Neale. Two will be elected.

The two-year seat is a totally separate race from the three-year terms. The candidates for this seat are James Babineau, Gerald O'Reilly and Dr. Michael Thomas. Only one of these will be elected.

The selectmen's race has four candidates running for two seats. Incumbent Jim Stewart is running against former selectman Carl Backman, Anthony Accardi and Michael McCoy.

There are three positions where candidates are running unopposed. William Strob, Sr. is seeking re-election to the Wilmington Housing Authority. Moderator Michael Caira is up for re-election, and Vaughn Surprenant is a candidate for re-election to the Wilmington Redevelopment Authority.

Voters from precincts one, two and five will vote at the Town Hall, at 121 Glen Rd. Voters from precincts three, four and six will vote at the Wildwood School.

During the past year, there have been some changes in precincts. Some of these changes will result in a change of voting locations.

The following streets were in precinct two, and are now in precinct three. Voters from these streets will now vote at the Wildwood School. Butters Row, Burlington Avenue (even numbers through 116), Chestnut Street, Clifton Street, Fenway Street, Floradale Ave, Main Street #563, Marion Street, Mill Road, Pembroke Street, Rollins Road, Safford Street, Stuart Street, Tobin Drive.

The following addresses have changed from precinct six to precinct three. Voters will still report to the Wildwood School. Woburn Street, #s 419 & 480.

The following streets have changed from precinct five to precinct two. Voters will still report to the Town Hall. Agostino Drive, Brattle Street (#s 1 thru 13), Christine Drive, Clark Street (#s 7 thru 48), Clark Terrace, Clorinda Road, Cypress Street, Faneuil Drive, Gandalf Way, Glen Road (even numbers, 58 thru 132), Harnden Street, Harvard Avenue, King Street Extension, Main Street (even numbers 80, thru 298), Massachusetts Avenue, Railroad Avenue, Rhodes Street (numbers 1 thru 7) River Street, St. Paul Street (numbers four thru six) Stone Street and Washington Avenue.

Voters who will be unable to go to the polls may vote by absentee ballot. This may be done over the counter at the town clerk's office, until noon on Friday.

For voters who cannot go to the Town Hall, the procedure is to request a ballot in writing. The ballot must be mailed to the voter and mailed back to the town clerk. There would no longer be time for this to take place prior to the election.

Weird wind damages Tewksbury yard

by Bill Conlon

Unlike Kansas, the Town of Tewksbury has never been known as a hotbed of tornadoes. A stray twister strikes the town only about once every ten years or so.

Then what on Earth was it that tore the roof off a shed on Marston Street last week?

Friday, April 10, was a warm spring day, mostly sunny. There was a slight sprinkle late in the day, but not the kind of thunderstorm activity which spawns tornadoes. A National Weather Service spokesman in East Boston agreed, snickering, that Friday was quite mild with no violence aloft.

But some sort of strange wind phenomenon apparently took a side trip to Marston Street that day.

Here's what happened:

Roger and Edie Wood and family live on Marston Street, near Whipple Road. Mrs. Wood said she was out of the house on Friday afternoon, but two of her neighborhood friends were sitting in the kitchen when they said they heard an "unbelievable" noise which sounded like a howling wind.

(The two women asked to have their names kept out of the newspaper.)

Anyway, one neighbor reported hearing the wind howl and said she looked out the window in time to see the trees in Mrs. Wood's backyard swaying violently. A tree in her own yard was stock still, she noted. Next, the neighbor said, she saw the roof torn from the shed beside the Wood's swimming pool and land in pieces in the yard.

This reporter paid a visit to Mrs. Wood's house to investigate. The pieces of the shed roof are heavy, and the entire roof must weigh at least 40 pounds. The shed itself, which covers the filter for the Wood's swimming pool, had been moved a few inches on its cinder block base, and the wall of the shed showed where the roof had been torn from its hinges.

Mrs. Wood also noted that her trash can lids had been scattered around the yard, and pointed out where they were landed. One of the lids was about 50 feet away.

Mrs. Wood's neighbor said she next heard the violent wind slam violently at a basketball hoop in the driveway. After that, she said, the noise faded and all was quiet again.

No one knows what sort of phenomenon danced through the Wood family's back yard, but an educated guess might be a "dust devil," a small twisting eddy of air sometimes seen in open fields. The Wood's house is located next to some power lines, and there could be enough room for one to form. Mrs. Wood said nothing like this had ever happened before in her nine years of living there.

Still, most dust devils, at least in this reporter's experience, only scatter some dirt and a few twigs before dying away. But to tear the roof from a shed?

That's one BIG dust devil.

Seafood preparation and antique exhibit at next WWC meeting

Wilmington Women's Club will hold its regular monthly meeting on Thursday, April 16, at the United Methodist Church.

The program will be a demonstration of "Preparation of Seafoods," presented by Home Economic Council members of the Middlesex County Extension Service, beginning at 10 a.m.

The seafood prepared during the program will be served at a petite luncheon under the direction of Barbara Dayton and her committee. The annual meeting will be held following the regular business meeting.

Handcrafted items created by club members will be distributed after the meetings.

There will also be a display of antique kitchen utinsils for all to enjoy.

Will hire consultant for environmental affairs

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington is in the process of hiring HMM Associates, a consulting engineering firm from Concord, to help head off environmental problems. According to Health Director Greg Erickson, the firm was selected from 12 other applicants on March 6.

Besides surveying the town for potential problems and places where hazardous materials are being used, HMM will also develop a plan to deal with emergencies or problems identified through the survey and act as a general consultant to the town, as needed.

"I feel this is a very necessary kind of activity that has to be ongoing. I know also that Wilmington is the first, or at least one of the first, to be headed in this aggressive direction," maintained Erickson adding "this approach is better than just reacting to problems."

While HMM answers to the town manager, it will also work in conjunction with the Hazardous Materials Committee. This reactivated committee coordinates the efforts of several town agencies on anything pertaining to hazardous materials. Members oversee plants using hazardous chemicals and vehicles transporting potentially dangerous materials through town. They check up on hazardous waste and dumping in wetlands as well as coordinate emergency procedures in case of a spill. They are also overseeing the Olin closure.

The committee serves in an advisory capacity and is made up of representatives from each town board and department. Also, adds Erickson, there has been some consideration given to involving volunteer citizens on sub-committees.

Rep. Beckwith's office hours

State Representative Geoffrey C. Beckwith, who represents Reading, North Reading and Wilmington's precinct 3 in the Massachusetts House, this week announced his schedule for April office hours.

"A state representative must be accessible to everyone in his or her district," said Beckwith, who holds regular office hours each month in order to make it easier for constituents to meet with him whenever they have a question or problem concerning state government.

Beckwith will hold April office hours at two locations: on Thursday evening, April 30, he will be at the Flint Memorial Library on Bow Street in North Reading from 5:30 to 7 p.m.; and on Thursday evening, April 30, he will be in the conference room of the Reading Public Library on Middlesex Avenue from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

"Interested citizens should never hesitate to get in touch with me at any time," said Beckwith, who invited residents to call him at either his State House office (722-2430) or at home (944-5030).

Planning board seeks limits on permit for Ristuccia Expo Center; questions building permit

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Planning Board has recommended certain safeguards and limitations they want attached to any special permit granted to the Ristuccia Exposition Center. The center is seeking a permit which would allow it to hold other events there beyond the scope of the original use, that of an ice arena.

The board's comments were in response to a request for input from the board of appeals. The planning board members, though, took advantage of the opportunity to vent their frustrations over the way rules and regulations may have been disregarded in erecting the building and the "mess" left behind for their board.

Planners discussed six conditions on the special permit. Those conditions are the submission of a formal site plan; the posting of sufficient security to make sure parking and site design standards are met; providing an emergency accessway for emergency vehicles, limiting the number of tickets sold to the number of seats available; limiting the number of accessory functions to not more than one per month; and granting the permit for six months only, subject to review by the board of appeals.

Members agreed to send a letter to appeals board chairman Bruce MacDonald saying they have yet to see a final site plan and that the majority of conditions imposed by planners on the original site plan haven't been met. These last included marking areas for traffic flow and vehicles, installation of outdoor lights, shrub plantings, and obtaining a variance for insufficient frontage and side yard setback.

During the brief discussion, members were confused on several points. For instance, they weren't sure how many site plans they had seen, but they were sure none of them met all board standards and conditions. Though they mentioned that the latest plan showed 403 parking spaces, they weren't sure if these included spaces from the service building which is part of the same lot. They also were unsure of actual seating capacity. Members threw out figures of 3,200, 2,000, and 1,800 seats, each of which would require a lot more than 403 parking spaces.

Michael McCoy told fellow members in a jesting way, "don't worry about it; in a couple of years it's going to be another car dealership."

Chairman Carole Hamilton pointed out that her board "saw junk for site plan reviews." She deplored the fact that "we don't know what we're dealing with here." She wondered aloud how Ben Ristuccia got a building permit for his AMC dealership in a general business zone and if he ever received a variance for the setback of the back of the arena.

If referring to the ice rink and the largely unmet Order of Conditions imposed by her board, she said "I don't know what to do with this - we're in so deep with this mess."

"And we'll get in deeper with accessory uses," added," added Nancy Stouffer, who proposed pulling occupancy permits to force compliance.

"Everyone was trying to work together and they just kept going and going," explained Planning Coordinator Sandy Murphy.

WILMINGTON SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Dear Wilmington Voter:

On April 18th you will be going to the polls to cast your vote for several candidates for official positions.

In the past six years since my election to the school committee, I have received a great deal of support from you, the voter.

I am asking at this time that you continue to give me your support by re-electing me to the school committee for the third time, on Saturday.

Since my election in 1981 I have kept foremost in my mind that I am a representative of the people of this community. Every decision I have made and every vote that I have cast has been in what I consider to be the best interests of school-age children and the community.

Any elected official at times is faced with having to make controversial decisions. I am well aware that some of the decisions I have made may not have pleased all of the voters but, I feel that the Wilmington voter did not elect me to be pleasing, but to do what is best for the children of the community.

Respectfully yours
Bridget Zukas

An ounce of prevention? Not in Tewksbury schools

by Bill Conlon

When you have something of value, you try to protect it. That's called common sense.

Whether you rely on security locks, burglar alarms or hire a guard, security is a basic need when valuables are involved. If security isn't provided, at least there is theft insurance available to replace any losses after the night creatures come to call.

That basic common sense, however, is sorely lacking in the Tewksbury public school system. The schools are chock-full of valuables, from computers and copiers to video equipment and petty cash, and all of it stands at risk. There is no theft insurance, no burglar alarms, nothing. In the parlance of the insurance industry, the school system is operating "naked."

Sometime before dawn on December 4 of last year, one or more unknown thieves struck Tewksbury Memorial High School. The building was checked by police around 3 a.m., but the custodian who unlocked the high school later that morning discovered that the school had been entered, and the losses were terrible.

The December break-in resulted in the theft of an estimated $20,000 in video equipment, and media specialist Don Stewart told the selectmen shortly afterward that the losses could have been three times that if the theft had occurred the night before.

The voters at a Special Town Meeting the following month were asked to spend $22,426 to replace the lost and damaged video gear and questions were asked about insurance. Selectman Bill Hallisey told the voters that theft insurance for the schools would be horribly expensive. As a stop-gap measure, part of the funds were earmarked for a steel security door for the media center, since the hoodlums gained access by hammering through the existing wooden door.

But the nightmare continues.

On March 7 of this year, thieves again struck the high school, this time making off with a reported $150 from the cafeteria, $200 in cash from candy sales, and a set of keys taken from the drawer of a locked desk.

Yet another break-in occurred on April 3, this time at the North Street School. When he unlocked the school that morning, Principal Bill Tsimtsos said he found desks rifled and file cabinets wrenched open. Taken was a small amount of cash and -- of all things -- a set of master keys for the school. Measures have been taken to "correct the situation" according to Assistant Superintendant John Ryan, but new locks just aren't enough. The hoodlums entered the school by kicking in a skylight.

Those entering the schools aren't all bad guys and hoodlums, however. One Tewksbury resident -- who will specifically not be identified -- said her son left his books behind one weekend and asked to be driven to the high school. She said her son walked around the building rattling doors until he found one unlocked, then calmly entered the school, retrieved his books and left again. He could just have easily have been carrying an acetylene torch to burn through the town's new steel security door at the media center.

Simply put, there are no security measures taken to protect the town's valuables in the schools.

Granted, the budget crunch has been particularly painful for the school department, especially since Proposition 2 1/2 took away much of the school system's autonomy. Prior to the Proposition, school budgets were approved solely by the school committees involved, without having to pass the straits of the Finance Committee or run the gauntlet of Town Meeting. Before Proposition 2 1/2, the school system could have paid for burglar alarms with nary a blink.

The School Committee is asking for almost $13.7 million to operate the schools for the next fiscal year, with nothing requested for security measures. The tone of this week's Board of Selectmen discussion of the school budget was one of restraint. Putting burglar alarms in all six schools would be an expensive proposition, certainly, but so was the purchase of $20,000 worth of video equipment, paid directly out of the taxpayer's pockets.

The ancient adage about "an ounce of prevention" has never been more true. In the case of Tewksbury schools, however, the cure has already topped $22,426. And there is no end in sight ...

The condos are still coming ...

An editorial which appeared on this page last week dealing with affordable housing is in need of an update.

First, the voters at the recent Andover Town Meeting decided 257-78 to accept the land at the end of Tewksbury's South Street for purposes of building affordable housing. Article 65 on the Andover warrant gave the town permission to acquire by gift, purchase or take by eminent domain the parcel for the purpose of building affordable housing. Andover also voted to appropriate $2.8 million to acquire the land.

As for access to the parcel, mention has been made of Andover constructing a road either from Dascombe Road (Tewksbury's East Street) or northwards from Route 125. Both routes pose serious problems.

The East Street route would entail crossing the Shawsheen River near Interstate-93 and would face stiff opposition. An officer of the Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (S.W.E.A.T.) said recently that his group would vigorously oppose any such crossing of the river.

From the other direction, the road leading north from Route 125 would require crossing a large swamp in the northern reaches of Wilmington. The swamp route would need to be almost a mile long, making that road also unlikely.

So, South Street through Tewksbury is still the only logical and existing access to the Andover parcel. Tewksbury will be receiving a bundle of traffic problems from the Andover plan, and little can be done in Tewksbury to stop it.

As a correction to the editorial, Tewksbury Planning Director Charles Frederiksen pointed out that the Planning Board would not be hearing discussions on the condo proposals for affordable housing which are now being considered in Tewksbury. Frederiksen said the Appeals Board would be hearing discussion on the condo proposals, not the Planning Board.

In Tewksbury, however, the condos are still coming ...

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Though it is unusual for me to respond to letters printed in the Town Crier, I felt that Mr. David Fitzgerald's letter to the editor of last week required a response.

Mr. Fitzgerald, who has run on two consecutive occassions for the board of selectmen, was critical of the column Frankly Speaking, because of its opinion on political signs in Wilmington, and its occassional non-local subjects.

First of all, I found David's letter in error. Issues conerning the state or federal government can hardly be described as "obscure," as David did last week. Secondly, it is my opinion that most of your readers enjoy Frankly Speaking, which is a well written and presented column.

Lastly, one interesting point may not have been stressed enough in Mr. Fitzgerald's letter. He is critical of political signs in the town, when he himself had two four by eight signs on Main street during his most recent bid for the board of selectmen. Therefore, David was hardly in a position to criticize.

Very sincerely yours,
Betsy Woods

A parting tribute

by Arlene Surprenant

Buzz Stapczynski said it all: his shoes will be hard to fill.

Monday night, veteran selectman Rocco DePasquale stepped down after nine years on the board. During his tenure, Rocco earned the respect and admiration of those residents he served so well. He handled difficult issues with integrity, wisdom, consistency and more than a touch of good humor and compassion. He had a knack or a gift, if you will, of bringing opposing sides together to resolve the unresolvable. He was an arbitrator in the true sense of the word. Though he thrived in the political arena, he rarely let politics stand in the way of good sense and the best interests of his town.

Perhaps the ultimate tribute that can be made to you, Rocco, is recognizing you have made a difference. You can be proud of your long years of service and dedication to Wilmington. We salute you, we love you, we wish you well. And if we're lucky, you will be back.

The great American pastime

With the advent of spring, it's once again time to participate in the great American pastime--town elections.

This Saturday, Wilmington voters will be faced with a choice of candidates for selectmen, school committee, housing authority, redevelopment authority, and moderator.

Residents have been bombarded with a plethora of signs, political ads, postcards, fliers, promises, and personal appeals in the past few months. The candidates, combined have spent thousands of dollars and hundreds of hours trying to reach and influence you, the voter.

Many of you will decide it's too inconvenient to take the time out of a busy day to vote. Many of you will be too caught up in last minute holiday shopping and outdoor work to cast a vote. Many of you will think it's a lost cause for your candidate and not bother going to the polls. Many of you just won't care.

Some of you will vote for a candidate as a favor to a friend or because you really believe all the rhetoric in his or her ads or speeches. Some of you will make your decision based on a candidate's connections - or lack of them. Some of you will decide you like a candidate because he looks the part, makes fancy speeches,or spends the most money. Some of you will cast a negative vote for the candidate who will be least likely to hurt the town once he's in office.

A chance to cast an informed vote is both a duty and a privilege. While there is still time, reread all the campaign literature and learn all you can about your candidate's background and experience; exactly how many campaign promises could, in reality, be kept; and where your candidate stands on the issues. Ask yourself if you would be proud to call yourself a Wilmington citizen once your choice is in office. If you can do all this, you will have fulfilled your obligation as a voter.

And above all, remember to take five minutes to go to the polls Saturday and pull that lever--an action which will do much to determine your own future and that of our town.

The humble Farmer
$10 million revisited

"WILL ROBERT SKOGLUND ACT IN TIME FOR TEN MILLION DOLLARS?"

That's what the letter from American Family Publishers said.

Realizing that this was more money than I could handle alone, I rushed next door and pressed the colorful document into the hands of my venerable neighbor, Gramp Wiley.

"Look," I cried. "Ed McMahon wants to award me a ten million dollar prize on live TV. It's the fortune of a lifetime. My nine extra claim numbers are on the latest official entry-order card. These are nine exclusive numbers that nobody else has. It's a dramatic new development in Skoglund winning potential."

Gramp received this news calmly. "I suppose you'll mail back the official entry-order card."

"Well, I returned the other six or eight official entries. There was a while there when an important reminder was coming every other week. As soon as I'd mail one back to prize awards headquarters, Ed would send me further documentation of prize eligibility."

"You stick with it and sooner or later there's going to be a drawing."

"Perhaps I should order some magazines," I said as I lowered my eyes. "Ed wrote please don't say 'no' again because I never paste first discount stamp here."

Gramp said, "You've come a long way, though. It must be a year or so since your clever lawyer friend, Crundell, spent a week figuring out what needed to be pasted where and which of the dozens of colorful enclosures was the official entry-order card."

Gramp smirked as he continued, "As I remember, Ed McMahon's top people who designed the enclosures were later hired by the IRS to make income tax forms."

"But now I've got nine more exclusive numbers that nobody else has," I cried. "My chances have never been better."

"Don't let me keep you from rushing to the post office," Gramp said as he pulled out a solar powered pocket computer, but let's take a minute to work out the odds with just one of your numbers.

"How many people do you suppose received the mailing?"

"Not more than a hundred million," I replied.

Gramp Wiley poked buttons. "Not enough zeros on this," he muttered. "Only goes up to 99 million. Well, we'll leave them off and add them when we're through.

"How many times did you act today and return your sweepstakes dispatch?"

"Six or eight."

"You're average, so we'll figure that everyone else mailed in six. That's six hundred million. How many extra prize claim numbers on each one?"

"I can't remember. This one has nine."

"We'll figure they all had nine. Nine times six hundred million is five billion, four hundred million--when I add on the extra zeros."

"Their computer is probably bigger than yours," I said lamely.

"Suppose that your number were to be picked..."

"It will be, it will be. I'm practically holding ten million dollars in my hands right now. Just think...most people spend a lifetime dreaming about being this rich."

"But suppose that all the other numbers are scanned by the computer first and that your's is the very last one."

Gramp Wiley poked at his computer. "There are 84,600 seconds in a day--times 365 is 31,536,000 seconds in a year. If the computer scans one entry every second, it would--let's see--one hundred seventy-one years and some odd months before they'd get to your winning number."

I did confirm my candidacy for ten million dollars. Even if it should take 171 years to send me the prize money the compounded back interest Ed will owe me will make my wait worth while.

Farewell gift Bob Cain did the honors as the selectmen presented outgoing chairman Rocco DePasquale with a gold watch. Rocco chose not to run after three terms on the board.

Rocco honored at last selectmen's meeting

Rocco DePasquale, chairman of the Wilmington Board of Selectmen, was honored at Monday's meeting for nine years of "dedicated service to the town of Wilmington." After Saturday's elections, DePasquale will no longer be a member of the board.

Fellow selectmen gifted him with a small wooden box inscribed with words of appreciation and a gold engraved pocket watch.

"We were going to give you a Paul Revere bowl but we only give them to Good Guys," joked Jim Stewart. Rocco was the town's first "Good Guy" in 1968.

DePasquale was momentarily at a loss for words. When he recovered his usual aplomb, he told the large crowd he had enjoyed both the controversy and taking stands on the issues as a member of the board but, most of all, he enjoyed the opportunity to help others.

He praised both his fellow selectmen and Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who, he said, does a good job and is never swayed "in the face of adversity."

Stapczynski returned the compliment, saying DePasquale "left big footsteps to follow in."

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Since it is only traditional to write about your obligation to vote on the week preceeding election day, guess what you're in store for this week? But this won't center around any guilt trip, in an attempt to get you out this Saturday; but only to give you some motivation to put down the rake and Easter eggs and head down to the Glen Road or the Wildwood for just fifteen minutes or so, between ten o'clock and eight o'clock this Saturday.

The first and foremost reason for anyone to vote is so that you might receive your "Complaining License." Unlike most licenses, this one is issued free of charge. It is a little red, white, and blue card with sharp edges, and it is issued to all citizens upon their exiting the voting booths. Said card is to be presented prior to every complaint you might utter, or put in writing, including complaints on traffic, water, taxes, dogs, or the rooster who crows next door. Without this 'Complaining License' your right to hem and haw will be most questionable.

Then there is the physical fitness aspect of the polling places. If you want to be Joe Civic Minded, you can hold your candidate's sign and either get sunburned, drenched by rain, or even a combination thereof. At the same time, one might even shed a few pounds walking about from sign holder to sign holder, comparing notes on who has the best method for passing the time while holding a wooden stick.

And while roaming around the polling place, you might even get the opportunity to take in some genuine gossip. "Can you believe she's supporting him!" Or better yet, you might overhear a candidate moaning, "My goodness, I thought he was supporting me!" As usual, politics can be full of surprises, which can at least make election day interesting, if not provocative.

But perhaps above and beyond all else, is the chance to settle once and for all the candidate who best represents the type of local government that you desire for your community. After weeks of where this one and that one stand on all the issues of the day, and having examined the character of each contender for public office, you're finally going to pull a lever which will be one of just a few thousand levers hit, deciding who sets educational policies, housing policies, and a number of issues concerning the future of this small bedroom community north of Boston. And a few things to run over in your mind, is what you may have read before. And that is the important role that any local committee or board can play in the lives of people who live in the town.

As such, to all those who make their votes heard only in the November elections, one might consider that presidents don't set property tax rates, congressmen don't formulate the curriculum taught to your kids in the public schools, and governors have little to do with local traffic and development issues. All and all, this Saturday at the polls should resemble the cows coming home.

Planning board urges approval of center project

by Arlene Surprenant

Though planning board member Michael McCoy urged his board to send a letter to the Wilmington Board of Selectmen disapproving the Rte. 129 (Town Center) project as presented, his motion failed two to one, with one person abstaining.

"We do have an obligation to the community to tell them how we feel about this," said McCoy Tuesday night, adding the proposal is a "hot issue" which will have significant impact on the town.

Dave Clark argued that, in its present shape, the Burlington Avenue Bridge is "a ticking time bomb" which needs to be replaced as soon as possible and not years away, as would happen if the town disapproves the DPW proposal. Of that plan Clark said, "I don't honestly see a reasonable alternative."

"I have problems with a blanket motion to recommend disapproval," said chairman Carole Hamilton. She pointed out that somewhere between the conceptual drawings shown by Diamond Crystal Salt at the public hearing and what the state says the bridge and roads will look like lies the truth.

"Somewhere in between those extremes there's some truth but I haven't seen it yet," she said.

When McCoy mentioned this is the first time Wilmington citizens have been able to speak out against the proposal at a public hearing, Hamilton disagreed saying there had been other opportunities. She added the town had looked at and turned down other alternatives for many years. She, too, agreed the problem of the bridge and resident safety needed to be addressed soon before it's too late.

Sand sweeper One sure sign of spring in Wilmington is when the D.P.W. starts sweeping the sand from the side of the road. Mark Peters was part of a crew working on Glen Road last Friday.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Sometimes local politicians forget the simple precept that actions speak louder than words. Before elections the voters and politicians have a unique relationship, somewhat like that of two people engaged to be married.

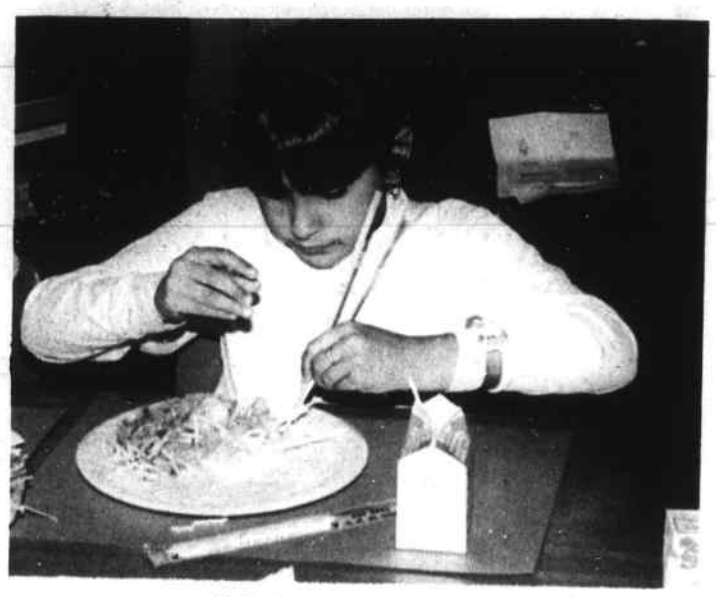

Before the wedding, as all married people will tell you, the people wishing to be joined together are on their best behavior. Men shave on Saturday, women curl their hair and wear perfume when washing the floor. Similar concern for appearances is usually displayed by politicians before election.

However, this year some of those politicians wishing for a long term relationship from me has sent confusing signals to me. I hear "I want to protect our quaint little community," but I see a bevy of junk cars and pieces of old trucks with political signs on our "quaint traffic clogged streets."

I find the use of junk cars on the roadside to keep a political sign in my field of vision at all times indefensible. Some say it's the American Way. I say it's illegal. Some say junk cars on the front lawn are a monument to an era past. I say, keep your monument in your back yard and don't let anyone use it for personal political gain. Some say it's the most economical way of politicking. I must remind them of the cost incurred by the town they want to serve, when the overworked health department must take time to enforce the sign law. I can't imagine why someone who wishes to help our community would litter it with junkyard refugees.

Actions do speak louder than words. April 18th I will vote for somebody I think I can live with after the honeymoon is over.

Sincerely,
Scott W. McGrath

Project China Kajal Lotia, a third-grader at the Heath Brook School in Tewksbury, seemed reasonably adept at handling chop sticks during an Oriental dinner put on during the school's "Project China."

Oriental dinner tops "Project China" for Heath Brook kids

by Bill Conlon

Youngsters at Tewksbury's Heath Brook School learned about China and the Orient recently when the school's third-graders put on "Project China."

Three classes of third-graders were involved in the Project, which included Oriental arts from fish kites for the ceiling to a Kung-fu demonstration by Jimmy Yang, whose father owns a martial arts studio in Boston's Chinatown.

The classes of Barbara Duarte, Paula Levis and Elaine Fiske were given a chance to write their names in Chinese, thanks to sixth-grader Lily Fu, and were taken on a field trip to see the Peking Chinese Acrobats at the Collins Center in Andover. On display in Mrs. Duarte's classroom was a set of Chinese artifacts borrowed from the Boston Children's Museum.

According to Mrs. Duarte, all areas of study were included in "Project China," from music and art to the computer-generated banners adorning her classroom walls.

The high point of "Project China," however, was an Oriental dinner, including fried rice and beef teriyaki, provided in honor of the Jade East restaurant on Main Street.

HOME OFFICE -- BETTER THAN EVER???

A few questionable loopholes have been closed but, for the most part, setting up a home office and deducting its expenses is still advantageous under the new tax law. Some elements have even become more liberal.

For instance, you can now write off up to $10,000 worth of personal computers or other business equipment in one year, up from $5,000. This is helpful mow that the investment tax credit has been eliminated; it no longer makes sense to depreciate your computer slowly. You still must prove the equipment is used more that 50 percent of the time for business.

You cannot lease your home office to your employer and take deductions attributable to rental income, but you CAN rent home the room and take the payment as passive income. The law has also lightened up the amount of home-office expenses you can write off against business, but allowed a carry-forward on them.

We'll help you keep more of what you make at

Institute still seeking site for group home

by Arlene Surprenant

Representatives from the May Institute and the Wilmington Housing Authority (WRA) came before the board of selectmen Monday night seeking help in locating a home for autistic children in town. Though it's been two years since the idea was first broached and a state grant of $180,000 was allotted for the project, not much has been accomplished.

Steve Anderson of the May Institute said the four bedroom home would be a "stepping stone" for a few children who will move from the facility in Chatham back to their own homes. He told the board he and others have not been successful in finding an acre parcel for the home.

WHA member Daniel Gillis suggested they consider the old Walker School site because of its strategic location near transportation, Rotary Park, and shops.

Selectmen chairman Rocco DePasquale asked that they consider utilizing the former site of Legion Hall if town meeting voters approve the land swap by the American Legion. A second option discussed was using a 10,000 square foot lot on Royal Street.

DePasquale warned however, that with residents in neighboring towns opposing the location of this type of home in their midst, there may be a similar problem in Wilmington. "I would hope (though) it may be more acceptable in Wilmington," he added.

Anderson replied "we're quite willing to work closely with neighbors and neighborhoods so everyone is happy."

In order to use town owned land, Anderson was told, two articles to lift the moratorium on the sale of this land and to convey the land to the housing authority would have to be placed on a special town meeting warrant. The meeting could be held as early as late spring or early summer, selectmen said.

Upon a recommendation by Jim Stewart, Anderson agreed to follow his suggestion to discuss land possibilities with the town planning board.

Tewksbury school news

North Street

Chapter 188, a Massachusetts Legislative initiative, provides direct funding to all of our schools. Based on a formula ($10.00 per student) each school is entitled to funding that may be used for new programs, materials, and equipment for schools.

Each year the state provides this funding to our individual buildings and asks that a school appointed council of teachers and parents use the money to improve the school climate. This year our school (based on last year's enrollment) received $4,280.00. The council members are as follows:

William Tsimtsos, principal; Joanne Crow, parent; Dawn Hannula, citizen at large (student): Louise Kelly, parent; Jean Roberson, parent; Alma Davis, teacher; Joan Ryan, teacher; Gene Sdoia, teacher; Carolyn McLaughlin, teacher.

The Council voted to spend the money as follows:

1. $3,000.00 - A copying machine to be used by teachers and Parents Advisory Committee.
2. $750.00 - Computer related materials and software.
3. $530.00 - Disability Awareness Program in two classrooms for the school year 87-88. This program is one which helps sensitize students to the attributes of the disabled.

Special Ed.

The Tewksbury Department of Special Education will sponsor the program, "What Books Do That Television Can't," on Tuesday, April 14, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Center School Annex. Featured speaker will be Donna Constantine, a teacher and very popular presentor on the topics of books, reading, and children's creativity. In her presentation, Ms. Constantine displays and reviews a number of "Read It To Me Again" books, and books appropriate to different age levels which help children deal with problems and crises.

All Tewksbury parents are invited to attend this program, and can pre-register by calling the office of Dr. Michele DeAngelis, Administrator of Special Education at 851-6796. There is no charge for this program and refreshments are included.

Heath Brook

On February 24, 1987, the Heath Brook School held the annual spelling bee contest sponsored by the Lowell Sun.

The winners from the fifth and sixth grade classes engaged in intense competition to earn the title of the best speller in the school.

The contest produced two winners who rightfully deserved the honor to be awarded the titles of the best spellers in our school.

Winner, Jennifer Levy, grade six, room 16; second place, Jay Mackey, grade six, room 20.

Mr. Fred Leahy, head teacher, organized and supervised the program. Judges for the contest were Miss Joanna Krainski, sixth grade teacher, and Jennifer Waterman, a sixth grade student.

Students participating in the spelling bee finals were:

Grade five: Matthew Kenny, Eric Krzywicki, Kelley Gallagher, Kara Kelley, Ariane Chisholm, John Byrnes.

Grade six: Danielle Bigley, Warren Wilkins, Ralph Cunningham, Sandeep Lotia, Jay Mackey, Jennifer Levy.

The staff and students of the Heath Brook School congratulate Jennifer Levy and extend their support and best of luck in the district finals, which will take place on April 24, 1987 at Durkin Hall, University of Lowell.

Tewksbury school news

Much has been written about the activities of school improvement councils and the additional expenditures which have increased technological advancement in the educational equipment used in schools. Computer usage has increased tremendously. Other technological advancements, such as videodisk players, have been slower to make an impact due both to the increased cost of such equipment and the expertise needed for its operation. Horace Mann grants hopefully will assist most schools to make some gains in staff development.

An area which will have more impact as time goes on will be the monitoring and testing aspect of Chapter 188. Every two years students in grades four, eight and 12 will be given an assessment test, which gauges the exposure given to students at these grade levels to important goals and objectives of reading, mathematics and science (eventually, a social studies sub-test area will be added). An analysis and in-depth examination of these results allow for curriculum gains at all grade levels. Appropriate departments of Tewksbury Junior High School have committed much released workshop time to this activity.

At present, departments are examining each of these areas by the specific stated objectives of the Massachusetts Assessment of Educational Progress. This study will give details as to when, where, how long, how and with what material each topic is covered within the established or actual curriculum used at that grade level in that subject area. From this should come a detailed look at the flow of curriculum which accompanies a student through the school system from kindergarten to grade 12. It will be the beginning of a curriculum management system for future monitoring of our pursuits.

In another vein, basic skills testing at grades three, six and nine will give us an identification of those students not measuring up to the minimum competencies that are the foundation of future success. A diagnosis of these result allows us to give remediation and prescriptive teaching to those in need. This attention at the bottom of the scale and hopeful, subsequent reduction in deficiencies will move the class average to a much higher level.

Thus, assessment and basic skills testing programs will play a big role in educational changes made in the next few years. This detailed analysis by staff will accelerate and enhance this aspect of Chapter 188. It will give greater accountability both in the total curriculum and for individual student performance at a basic level. The staff of Tewksbury Junior High School welcomes this opportunity for reform and growth.

Miceli urges law for elderly tax relief

State Rep. James Miceli urges Wilmington voters to vote acceptance of a new State Law which would provide tax relief to certain elderly or the widowed individuals at the April 25, 1987 annual town meeting.

"They are the innocent 'victims' of both inflation and revaluation," Miceli said. "Last year the Legislature passed a measure granting up-dated property tax exemptions to the qualifying elderly and to surviving spouses.

"But," Miceli pointed out, "the measure is subject to local approval." The benefits provided for in the legislation will not be allowed to those qualifying residents of Wilmington unless Town Meeting accepts Clause 17D of Chapter 73 of the Acts of 1986.

"Simply stated, we need a 'yes' vote on Article 25 on the Town Meeting warrant," Miceli said.

If the warrant is approved, qualifying individuals will be eligible for a property tax exemption provided their total assests do not exceed $40,000.

Under prior law, a qualifying individual applying for property tax relief could not have more than $40,000 in assets, including their place of residence, after their $60,000 exemption. Clause 17D eliminates inclusion of their place of residence as an allowable asset as well as eliminating the $60,000 exemption.

"We in the Legislature saw a real threat, throughout the Commonwealth, of people on pensions losing their homes because inflation and local revaluations increased the value of their homes beyond allowable limits," he said.

"Passage by the Town Meeting of Clause 17D will help people from becoming homeless after a lifetime of hard work," he said. "The article ought to be accepted. It is simply the right thing to do for our elderly and widowed."

WILMINGTON

Wilmington has the reputation of being a very livable community with excellent local services and school system.

Unlike a number of neighboring towns, it has few rental properties. Most homes here are single family, and many are of a considerable size.

There is a fair amount of industry in Wilmington, providing work for many local residents. However, industry is well away from most residential areas.

Town seeks $60k for tax case

At this time there is a suit in the Appellate Court of Massachusetts alleging that the Town of Wilmington is over-accessing four of the principal business firms in Wilmington. Avco, Polyvinyl, Raffi & Swanson and General Electric are the four firms which are said to have been over assessed, thus resulting in higher taxes.

In the Massachusetts Appellate Tax Courts there are almost always suits against the towns and cities with a large business or industriai base. This type of work is an attractive, and generally a profitable business for some firms of attorneys.

Assessment of business or manufacturing properties is complicated. It is not at all like the assessment of homes. Empty space, in a leased building can mean losses, and the firm doing the leasing may be entitled to a lower assessment.

There are other factors as well. An assessor in a town or city has to be on the alert for everything that is done.

When a judge in an Appellate Tax Court makes a decision it is generally for a three year period. Company ABC, the judge may decide, has been overcharged at a value of $10,000 a year because of empty space, or because of some other reason. For the next three years the tax bill must be $10,000 lower.

The attorney's fee is generally one third. Thus, in a three year ruling he would get $10,000 and Company ABC would get $20,000.

But plenty of law suits can mean plenty of cases where there are profits. One Massachusetts attorney, in the recent past represented a chain of stores, having places of business in many communities. He won in every town but one.

Out of state appraisal firms are now looking for business in Massachusetts. A Pennsylvania firm started to penetrate a few years ago.

Firms in Wilmington, a few months ago received letters from that firm. DuCharme - McMillan Associates were offering to review the assessments made by the town for suits before the appellate tax court.

The findings of the Pennsylvania firm were assigned to a Boston law firm. Cuddy, Lynch, Manzi & Cunningham of Boston are now in charge of a lawsuit against Wilmington. That same law firm is also representing Andover in a different case before the Appellate Tax Court.

In other words, like other law firms, they are prepared to argue on either side of any given law suit. Cuddy, Lynch, Manzi & Cunningham have, to assist them, an appraiser named Richard Dennis.

Town Counsel Alan Altman is in charge of the defense of Wilmington. He has, as an assistant, Attorney Joseph Dalton of Boston, he who, a few years ago represented the chain of stores referred to above.

The Court Schedule is not yet complete. Principal Assessor Anthony Krzeminski of Wilmington is hoping for a speedy hearing. The longer the case takes, before the hearing, the more that the interest charges may mount up. That will have an effect on the Overlay Account, which Krzeminski does not want to happen.

Krzeminski and Altman will be asking the town meeting for a $60,000 appropriation, in the coming town meeting (Article 12).

Scattered-site housing

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held on Carey Street in Wilmington last Friday for eight units of family housing, to be constructed by the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA). Known as "scattered site" units, the homes will be modular single-family units. Four of the homes will be in the so-called "Lost Colony" section, near North Reading. On hand for the groundbreaking ceremonies were: WHA members Elaine Hachey and Warren Newhouse, WHA Chairman Kevin McMillan, Massachusetts Secretary of Housing and Development Amy Anthony, WHA member Dan Gillis, Rocco DePasquale, chairman of the board of selectmen, WHA member Bill Strob, Lynda MacAfee of Sciaba Construction, Selectman Jim Gillis, WHA Executive Director Lillian Buckley, architects Mariana Vaida and Michael Hicks, and Selectman Bob Cain.

Attention: Voters of Wilmington

Beware of last minute ads, mailings or releases that seek to distort or impugn a candidate's stand or voting record. It would be too late to answer ads of this type because this is Election Week. This has occured in past Wilmington Elections.

I have done everything possible to let you know that I value your support and vote. Because I have refused to accept any campaign contributions and have spent my own money to fund this campaign, I want to emphasize to you that your interest is my only concern.

I have attended many coffee hours so that you the voter could hear my position on issues and could question me at length on your concerns. I have knocked on almost every door in town in order to meet you and ask for your support. Each questionnaire sent to me by organizations and newspapers has been answered by me; and I have spoken at this year's League of Women Voters Candidates' Night.

As a member of the Planning Board, I have shown that I am not afraid to make those tough decisions and to speak at Town Meeting to fight for your interests.

Wilmington High School

Eleventh grade student Sharon Fossey was recently recognized for "outstanding achievement" by Avco Systems of Lowell Street. In a letter to WHS Principal Paul Fleming, Junior Achievement Advisor Karen Osborn said Sharon held the office of President for Global Goods, a Junior Achievement Co., during the 1986-87 term. In that time, Sharon organized and executed various tasks which led to over $1,000 in sales and a generous donation of over $250 to the Junior Achievement Scholarship Fund for 1988.

Sharon is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Derrick MacLean of Woodside Avenue.

Evening at Pops Concert

The annual Evening at Pops Concert Tuesday night showcased the talent of 25 high schoolers in the Jazz Rock Ensemble and several soloists, who performed special numbers throughout the night.

According to Music Director Barbara Mette, the concert featured a variety of music from pop and rock to old Glen Miller tunes and jazz renditions. "In the Mood," "Little Brown Jug," "String of Pearls," "Kansas City," and "The Rose" were only a few of the well received numbers at the West Intermediate School last night.

Guitarist Matt Parr soloed with "Midsummer's Daydream" while singers Paula Malenchini, Cheryl Hartford, and Karen Snyder also performed individual numbers. A special treat was in store for the receptive audience in the form of a solo by drama teacher Lynda St. James, a professional singer.

Because 15 of the musicians will be graduating this year, the seniors got the chance to perform a special rendition of Stevie Wonder's "Sir Duke".

Ticket holders were seated at separate tables in the West Intermediate cafeteria, a la the Boston Pops, and served popcorn and tonic.

West Intermediate

Forty-five eighth grade students from the West observed a taping of the "Miller's Court" television show Tuesday evening. The trip was under the leadership of Mrs. Boucher, a junior high social studies teacher. A year ago, Mrs. Boucher was a member of the jury which decided one of the televised cases.

A dress-up dance is in the planning stages for all students at the West. The dance, which will be highlighted by the crowning of a king and queen, will be held on May 8. It is being sponsored by the Student Council under the guidance of Miss Lucey, council advisor.

Shawsheen Elementary

Don't forget to purchase your tickets this week for the taste-tempting ice cream smorgasbord to be held in the Shawsheen cafetorium May 8. Tickets cost one dollar each and will entitle the bearer to a choice of vanilla, chocolate, or strawberry sundaes.

If you are a parent and wish to donate two hours of your time to dish up the ice cream, please contact a PAC member or the school office.

Pink slips for 21 teachers

by Arlene Surprenant

The practice of terminating non-tenure personnel prior to town meeting came under fire by two members of the Wilmington School Committee last Wednesday. Though all members agreed the practice was hard on teacher morale, only Tony Accardi and Bridget Zukas voted against a recommendation by Supt. Robert Horan to terminate 21 teachers throughout the system.

Horan said he made the recommendation to prevent "financial catastrophe," especially should voters at town meeting disapprove the school budget.

Under state law, teachers have to be notified by April 15 or they are entitled to receive a year's salary whether they are dismissed or not. Horan added, because of declining enrollment, they have to release 11 teachers. At this time, however, administrators are unsure which teachers will actually be dismissed or if more than 11 will be terminated. That will depend on which courses students choose at the high school level next year and town meeting action.

Accardi initiated the discussion on the practice, which has been ongoing since Prop 2 1/2. He took exception to the fact that 21 teachers are being notified instead of only 11. He pointed out this is a "tremendously traumatic experience" and the reason why some young professionals choose to leave teaching.

Zukas echoed Accardi, saying it was time to stop the practice and look at the message it sends to Wilmington teachers.

"This is one of the most distasteful things the school committee has to do," agreed Phil Fenton adding, however, the practice is "absolutely necessary" and fiscally responsible.

Suzie Cushing recognized "It's a procedural thing (but) I wouldn't want to get the letter."

Committee members supported Horan's recommendation in a four to two vote.

Farewell for school board members

by Arlene Surprenant

Two Wilmington school committeemen bade farewell to fellow members at a relaxed meeting last Wednesday. Terms were up for nine year veteran Phil Fenton and newcomer Suzie Cushing, who was appointed to fill a seven week vacancy as a tribute to her father.

According to Fenton, his time on the board was marked both by frustrations and rewards.

"I feel I've done a decent job," he said as he thanked Wilmington students "for allowing me to serve you."

Members made some complimentary remarks as they wished him well. They also gifted Fenton with a plaque that recognized his "service, dedication, and commitment to the children of Wilmington" and a blue corduroy Wilmington jacket with his name embroidered on the sleeve.

"This is probably the most meaningful thing I got out of the school committee in five years....this has a great deal of meaning for me," a teary eyed Fenton said of the jacket.

Cushing read a prepared statement in which she told the committee, "I think I have brought true Spiris tradition with a little Cushing flair to this committee."

In addition, she said, "I sincerely hope that those who felt I would not be much more than the bereaved daughter of Mitch Spiris just sitting here in tribute to her father would now have the courage to admit that I was a contributing member in the past seven weeks."

As she promised she would seek a position on the school committee in the near future, Shirley Callan told her, "the nicest thing I can say to you, you sure are your father's daughter."

Students win essay contest

The Wilmington Women's Club is pleased to announce that Matthew R. McManus, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McManus of Williams Avenue, and Kristen L. Lubanski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lubanski of Cunningham street, are the top winners in their statewide essay contest. Matthew copped first place while Kristen came in second. Both students are in Mrs. Thuline's class at the North Intermediate School.

The essay theme was "Sharing is Caring," which is the motto of this year's Mass. State Federation of Women's Clubs (MSFWC) administration.

Both youngsters, along with their mothers, journeyed to a MSFWC meeting in Newton to receive their certificates and monetary prizes from President Nancy Beatty. On hand to applaud the accomplishments of both Matthew and Kristen were Wilmington Women's Club members Liz White (president), Barbara Dayton, Helen Handrahan, Edith Michelson, Judi Simmons, Jeane Sottile, Marjorie Walsh, and Marion Woller.

Annual Meeting offers controversial issues

by Bill Conlon

The articles for the upcoming Tewksbury Annual Town Meeting were discussed by the town Finance Committee recently, and the voters can expect an interesting meeting beginning on May 4.

There are a number of pay increase requests on the warrant, along with a few big-bill items and some controversial zoning changes.

Article Three seeks a few sizeable pay increases for some of the elected positions in town, while leaving others unchanged. No pay raises are asked for the Town Moderator, Board of Selectmen or Board of Health, but the position of Auditor would received almost three times the current pay if the article is approved as written.

Article 14 is certain to prompt a stormy debate, since it asks for a new by-law which would virtually ban All-Terrain Vehicles (ATVs) and snowmobiles in town. Property owners could still operate the popular machines on their own land, while agricultural, emergency, and construction uses are also excluded from the ban.

Article 15 seeks to establish a noise by-law in the town, but recent discussion before the Board of Health and Board of Selectmen has pointed out that enforcement could be difficult.

Article 17 seeks to change the Selectmen-Town Manager charter in a number of ways, including loosening the qualifications for the Town Manager position and making it possible to change the charter at future Town Meetings.

The Department of Public Works submitted a number of funding requests in the warrant, with Article 19 asking $25,000 for construction of a drain line on Kennedy Road; Article 20 seeking $80,000 to repaint the water tower on Astle Street; Article 23 asking $75,000 for an engineering study on the Water Distribution System; Article 27 requesting $50,000 to repair Westland Drive (with a possible 50% state reimbursement); Article 29 asking permission to transfer $295,000 from the sewer construction account for an engineering study of the next phase of the sewer system.

Article 25 and 26 seek a pay raise for DPW Superintendant Bill Burris.

Article 31, submitted by the Personnel Board, seeks to change the grievance procedure for the town's union employees.

Article 37, while brief, seeks to have the Board of Selectmen and the School Committee form a No Smoking policy for the town. The Board of Health recently approved such a policy, which will outlaw smoking during public meetings, and is due begin on May 1, 1987.

The School Committee has three sizeable funding requests on the warrant, along with two minor ones. Article 38 seeks $25,000 for an engineering study on the heating systems in the schools; Article 40 asks for $18,000 to expand the high school parking lot; and Article 41 seeks $35,000 to plan for repairs or replacement of the roofs on all six public schools in town.

The most controversial articles, however, are near the end of the warrant.

Article 48, brought by Jack Kuchinski and others, seeks $350,000 to be administered by the Board of Selectmen, to "restore safe transportation" for youngsters attending private schools.

Article 49, submitted by Ed Flanagan and others, seeks $9,000 (more or less) to recover court costs incurred when Flanagan's group RORNA (Restore Our Residential Neighborhood Assoc.) sued the Board of Appeals over the granting of a use variance for the D.A.V. on Pond Street.

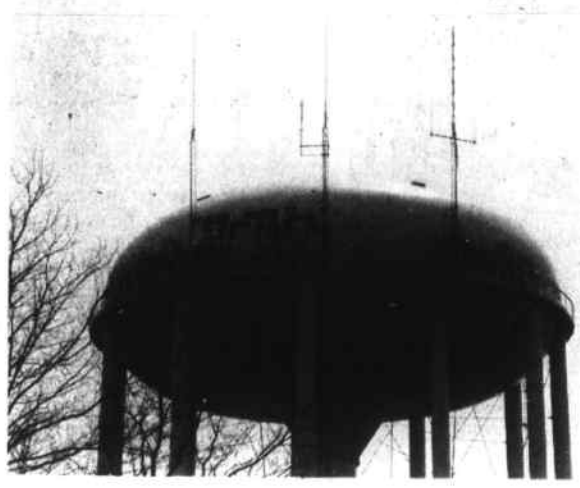

Articles 51 and 52 seek changes to the zoning by-law, and both will probably meet with prolonged discussions.

Article 51 asks to have three residential properties, located at the intersection of North and Andover Streets, re-zoned to a General Business District. Thomas P. Kelley, the owner of the center property and the brother of Selectman Jay Kelley, recently told the Planning Board that his property could no longer be considered residential due to heavy traffic and industrial developments in the area.

Article 52 seeks to re-zone a 4.5 acre tract of land beside the Roper Estates condo development from general residence to multi-family. At the Planning Board this week, a map was displayed showing 24 living units on the property, should the re-zoning request be approved.

The 1987 Annual Town Meeting gets underway at 8 p.m. on May 4, in the gymnasium of the Memorial High School off Pleasant Street.

Voters registration is now being conducted by the Town Clerk's office, in preparation for the meeting.

Sky writing One of the articles in the upcoming Tewksbury Annual Town Meeting asks $80,000 to repaint the town water tower off Astle Street. Vandals have been spray-painting the tower for years, and DPW Superintendant Burris seeks to remove the grafitti.

Five students complete banking mini–seminar

David Bruce, Robert Carbone, Sheila McEwen, Kim Russo and Robert Whitney, seventh and eighth grade students at Wilmington's North Intermediate School, have just completed a mini-seminar, learning the proper methods for writing checks and reconciling bank statements. The students volunteered a study period to participate in the seminar.

Mrs. Mary Driscoll, principal of the school, initiated this seminar to give her students an introduction to a small segment of the business sector as it affects consumerism. Mrs. Ann Simmons, Business Department head at Wilmington High School, conducted this mini-educational workshop.

Using banking materials donated by Middlesex Bay Bank, the students simulated applying and opening a checking account, depositing and writing checks, and concluded the learning experience by the reconciliation of a simple monthly checking account statement.

The five students involved were awarded awarded a Certification of Recognition, by Mrs. Simmons, for the successful completion of "Your Checking Account" mini-seminar.

Mrs. Simmons expressed the hope that this seminar would be the vanguard of the new generation of business education aimed at the lower secondary levels, seventh and eighth grades.

School committee candidates respond to questions

The Wilmington League of Women Voters has prepared questions for candidates for office in Wilmington.

These questions and others were asked at a candidates' night at the Wilmington library last Thursday evening. The candidates' night will be broadcast on cable channel six on Wed., April 15 at 8:30 p.m.

Questions for school committee candidates, the housing authority candidate and the redevelopment authority candidate appear on this page. The question for the candidates for selectmen are on the opposite page.

The election will be on Saturday, April 18 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. The polls will be at the Town Hall (former Glen Road School) for precincts one, two and five, and at the Wildwood School for precincts three, four and six.

Questions to School Committee Candidates

1. Do you think that teacher's salaries in Wilmington are adequate to attract and retain good teachers?

2. Are you satisfied with Wilmington's performance on the State Curriculum Assessment test administered last year? Why, or why not? Do you have any recommendations?

Candidates for three year term: Bridget T. Zukas, incumbent; James A. Demos, Joanne Neale, Andrea M. Paglia.

Candidates for two year term: James Babineau, Jr., Gerald O'Reilly (no response); Michael J. Thomas (no response).

Bridget Zukas.

1. We have made great progress in raising our teachers' salaries during our recent negotiations. The beginning salary of $18,000 makes us competitive with all the surrounding towns at this level. At the top end of the scale this last raise has brought us within the average status of surrounding communities. Over the next few years with raises of seven and one-half percent we can reach an even higher rate within the Merrimack Valley. It is important to realize that the Town Budget can absorb raises only by degrees and this consideration plays a vital part in teachers' salaries.

2. The State of Mass. Educational Assessment Program tested Wilmington students in grades 3,7, 11 in the categories of reading, mathematics and science in 1986. The results demonstrate our strengths in grade three in all categories and scores above the state average in grades seven and 11. Grade students excelled in vocabulary, evaluating, interpreting, numeration and fractions and decimals. In elementary geometry they scored above the state average, but not at the standards we hoped to achieve...

James Demos

1. At this time the teachers' contract was not available for inspection by the candidates. The teachers' contract was negotiated for three years and it offers beginning teachers, with a Bachelors' Degree, a starting salary of $18,000 with a $1,000 increase for the first three years. For the teachers at the higher end of the salary scale there also was a substantial increase. Prior to this contract, the Wilmington teachers' salary scale was 19th out of 20 in comparison to surrounding communities....

2. No I am not satisfied. This test is given biannually statewide for the purpose of identifying for the school system and the community areas in the curriculum and instruction needing or not needing improvement. In reviewing Wilmington's results, in my opinion the data indicates the following:

Grade 11 - in the areas of reading, math and science our students scored at the higher level of the average and above average range. At this time, the school system is performing adequately, but there is room for improvement...

Joanne S. Neale

1. I believe that new teachers' contract is a positive step in the right direction for bringing salaries up to a level that will continue to attract highly motivated teachers to the system. We must work together to retain our good teachers by being committed to further progress in the next contract. We cannot stand still in our search for excellence in education which is a reflection on our commitment to hire and keep good instructors for our students.

2. Generally speaking Wilmington did well on the State Curriculum Assessment Tests. For the most part, scores in reading, math, and science were higher than the State average and on a par or slightly over the similar background communities with which our schools were grouped. We must remember that these tests are designed to look at performance over a period of years in order to analyze performance trends accurately. This was only the first year of the test which will be administered every other year from now on....

Andrea M. Paglia:

1. Monetary incentives are necessary to attract good teachers; but to retain good personnel is not entirely a contractual issue. School systems should offer individual incentives and support for the teachers' goals and help them realize their full potential and qualities. Man does not live by bread or contract alone. Not meeting intellectual, social and personal needs will force any person to seek an increase in monetary satisfaction out of frustration. Chapter 188 offers a legislative incentive for a solution...

2. To be satisfied is like having a good meal - it sustains life. However, to the poor, it does not eliminate the worry where the next meal is coming from. For the middle class, it does not change the concern about the quality of the next meal. For the well-to-do, it does not change the fact that they will be hungry again. Why I mention these things is to stress the purpose of the test; which was not to be satisfied, but to examine our curriculum....

James J. Babineau Jr.

1. In examining the Bachelor's maximum and Master's maximum levels of surrounding towns (Woburn, North Reading, etc.) I feel Wilmington has achieved a salary competitive with these towns. However, the salaries of these towns must be continuously monitored to insure that this favorable comparison is retained. The ability to retain good teachers also depends on such factors as administrative backing, curriculum input, flexibility of instruction, and the promotions of qualified staff within the system.

2. Wilmington compared either within the comparative band or above this band in grades 11, seven and three. The tests are meant to be utilized in the assessment of curriculum. Generally, I am pleased with Wilmington's performance. However, the Earth-Space curriculum in grade 11 along with the Wildwood curriculum should be looked at by the teachers. I should add, however, that scores on standardized tests are not always indicative of a problem. For the problem is sometimes the test itself.

Question to Housing Authority Candidate

Housing needs are being addressed by more units at Deming Way and construction of scattered site housing. What other avenues would you pursue to meet Wilmington's Housing needs?

Candidate: William Strob Sr., incumbent.

William F. Strob Sr.

I would pursue more family and elderly housing by working with my board members to obtain more land once the moratorium is rescinded. It has taken the Housing Authority Board close to four years of hard work and long hours to gain our goal for eight family homes and 32 units of elderly. The ground breaking for the family homes is April 10 and the elderly contract will be going out for bid very soon...

Question to Redevelopment Authority Candidate

Given the proposed physical layout of the intersection of Rtes. 62 and 129, what is your vision of an ideal Business Center for Wilmington.

Candidate: Vaughn R. Surprenant, incumbent.

Vaughn R. Surprenant:

Addressing the proposed physical layout of the intersection of Routes 62 and 129 is, at this time, a very difficult question to answer. As you are now aware, your questions was posed prior to the Department of Public Works, Design Public Hearing--March 30, 1987.

The hearing specifically addressed the Routes 62 and 129 Reconstruction Project. After hearing input and suggestions from our Board, other Town Boards, concerned, interested, and vested townspeople, and those of the business community, it became obvious that the project, and or its scope, could be in jeopardy.

Candidates for selectmen

Question to Candidates for Selectmen

Last year $15 - $20,000 was appropriated to study the feasibility of an Electric Light Company for Wilmington. This year the Town is seeking $140,000 at Town Meeting for a study to assess the value of property sought for an Electric Company. What is your position regarding Wilmington developing its own Electric Company, and why? How do you see a Wilmington Electric Company affecting homeowners? Businesses?

Candidates: James C. Stewart, incumbent; Anthony Accardi Jr., Carl A. Backman, Michael V. McCoy.

Selectmen

Jim Stewart:

It is important that the Town evaluate alternative means of Electric power supply. To do this we first must support the budget appropriation request at annual Town Meeting for detailed feasibility reports.

These reports will assess not only the advantages of moving ahead with our own Electric Light Department but also the risks associated with such a move. There are many more facts to be evaluated before we can determine whether the formation of a Wilmington Municipal Light Department would be in the best interest of the Town of Wilmington as a whole...

Anthony Accardi Jr:

I do not feel that the Town of Wilmington should be in the electricity business. The profit and cost projections that the Town has been given are based on a certain quantity of electricity sales. The real question is, what does Wilmington do if the amount of electricity it sells is less than expected? The cost of maintaining the power plant would have to be passed on to taxpayers and/or electricity users. If the Wilmington Light Co. plan fails the economical consequences could be colossal....

Michael McCoy

James Stewart

Carl A. Backman Jr.

I support the article to allocate funds for a feasibility study. From preliminary indications by the consultant doing the initial work, it appears there can be positive returns to the town. It has been apparent, historically, that the town of Reading will not share control of Reading Electric; despite the fact they derive approximately 60 percent of their revenues from our town. Presumably, this has been a profitable utility for Reading; a thorough study should give us a basis for judgement as to whether it will be a positive investment for Wilmington...

Michael V. McCoy

Wilmington's Electric Study consultant's progress report makes a somewhat convincing argument for embarking on this project. He states "The most attractive options are for the Town of Wilmington to establish its own Electric Company." He also implies that Reading Municipal Light has few options to hold down the price of electricity for its customers. The financial analysis he presents lends emphasis to his argument. However, when I am given the opportunity to discuss his report with him, I have some questions I would like answered...

On-purpose accident The accident scene in front of the West Intermediate School Saturday afternoon wasn't as bad as it looked. The blood was fake, and the smashed car was placed against the telephone pole. The accident was staged for the taping of a training film for the Med Flight helicopter, out of the Boston University Medical Center.

Taped for training The key to the scene here is the video camera. Louis Glass, the man with the camera, is director of training for the Boston University Medical Center. The "patient" in the car is his brother Marty.

Ready for removal While firefighter Linda Giles holds the patient's head stationary, other firefighters work to put him into an X-P-One extrication device, which allows a patient with a back injury to be removed safely.

Med-Flight copter Firefighters then carried the stretcher and patient to the waiting helicopter. The scene had to be reshot, because a pole was in front of the camera position when the helicopter landed. The exercise began before 1 p.m., and continued until sunset, to allow a scene to be shot with the copter taking off into the sunset.

Planners review problems in proposed subdivision

Builder Paul Butt's Hamilton Woods subdivision located off Rte. 62 near Int. 93 posed some problems for members of the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night.

Engineer-in-training James McKenney of Robert Anderson asked planners for a continuance on the definitive plans until proponents meet with the Water and Sewer Commissioners in early May. Board members granted the continuance with the stipulation they have 60 days from the date of commission approval to look closer at configurations.

One of the major problems, said McKenney, is the lack of water mains under Rte. 62. Proponents plan to meet with commissioners on a plan to loop a main from Salem Street to Middlesex Avenue. This loop is expected to help with water pressure.

Another problem is access onto a busy state road (Rte.. 62). In order to avoid too many roads exiting 62, proponents intend to create one access road with smaller roads feeding to 17 lots.

Other problems under discussion included the disturbance of wetlands, which is really a conservation issue; building four homes off Salem Street without benefit of a paved street; movement of emergency vehicles in a large wetland area with no turnaround; and not fulfilling all of board conditions in the preliminary plan.

The subdivision will be situated on 22.1 acres of an R20 zone. It will contain 17 lots and an 800 foot cul-dde-sac road which would require a waiver because it's over the 500 foot limit.

Planning board members said they would request their next meeting be a joint one with the Conservation Commission because of the number of conservation issues involved.

An observant resident of a Boutwell Street neighborhood called the police Monday morning when three men were observed leaving a car at 53 Boutwell Street, an address to which none of them belonged. Wilmington senior topics

First anniversary

On April 9, Wilmington senior citizens celebrated the first anniversary of the Buzzell Senior Center. It was a wonderful day. God was good to us. The rain stopped by Thursday morning. Approximately 200 of our seniors enjoyed the day.

We are grateful to our guest who joined us in celebrating. We thank May Bliss and Gil Smith, two of our seniors for entertaining us at the piano. "They are terrific" a quote from all who sang along with them.

[and] no one's going to put money into something that's going to be torn down," she said.

Equally forceful was housing authority member Dan Gillis, who urged selectmen to reject the project because "you get what they (the state) want" once the town accepts the proposal. He advocated the formation of a committee to look into other ways of accomplishing the same ends. He felt strongly that the town has a responsibility to see that the job is done right.

"I think we should do something, but this--absolutely no," he cried. Almost everyone present agreed.

Dogs in pound

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dogs in the pound:

Pair of beagles, one male, one female, black nylon collars, picked up Mar. 12 on Hopkins Street.

Female husky, black, brown and white, blue collar, found on Ballardvale Street April 7.

The dog officer can be reached by calling the police station business line at 658-5071 or 5072.

Thanks, Jim

Thank you is extended to Jim Miceli for taking the time out of a very busy day at the State House to be with us. Without his help we would not have had this day to celebrate. Jim presented the seniors with a state flag, which had been flown over the State House on April 8.

We will hang it with pride in the Center. Jim also introduced Edward Callan of the Ed Callan Interest Co. Mr. Callan has generously donated a beautiful sign for the center at the request of Jim. It will be erected on the hill in front of the Center very soon. Thanks again Jim.

Markey-McCoy, thanks

Congressman Edward Markey was not able to attend the celebration, but he presented the center with a Congressional flag on the occasion. We thank Congressman Markey. We thank Michael McCoy for taking time out of his busy schedule preparing meals in his restaurant, Michael's Place, and running for selectman, in order to make the presentation for the Congressman.

Buzz and Rowland

We are also grateful to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski and Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard Rowland for helping us celebrate our greatest accomplishment.

Painting to resume

The painting and sketching class will resume Tuesday, April 21 in the craft room starting at 2:30 p.m. Mark will be leaving us on April 30 as he has accepted a full time job. Blood pressure-diabetes

Nurse Abbie will be at the Center Thursday to check blood pressures and give diabetes and blood tests, starting at 1:30 p.m. Please get a number from the office when you enter the center.

"Nunsence"

We have many seniors on the waiting list for the "Nunsence" play on April 30. If you have signed up but know you will not be able to attend, please call the center as soon as you can so another senior will be able to enjoy the day.

More seniors needed

We need more seniors in the craft room to work on projects. The quilt the women were working on has been completed and put away for the fall fair. If you want to learn how to make a quilt a new one will be started very soon.

The stallion

The proud, beautiful, black stallion stood gallantly on the hill, loking down at his small band of mares. His eyes shone brightly from the setting of the golden sun. When he runs, his muscles slide smoothly under his black skin, his hooves making a clucking noise in the soft, green turf. As he cicles his band, his long tail streams in the wind. He gallops faster until he is just a black blur enjoying his freedom.

A magic flower

Once upon a time there was a turtle and a toad. They lived near the pond in a little house. Every day the turtle would go for a swim in the pond, while the toad went to the field to pick some flowers. One day while the toad was picking flowers, he found a magic flower. Toad turned the turtle into a toad. Now he was a friend to play with in the field.

The midnight party

There once was a girl named Lisa. She had a New Year's Eve party and sleep-over with her friends named Teri, Beth, Kim, Laura, Tara, and Penny.

At midnight when they were all in bed, the cupcakes started to dance and so did the party hats, cups, brownies, fruit punch, and the bowl of popcorn. The music went on very loud. Lisa woke up, and she saw everything. She woke her mom. Her mom said, "Go back to bed!" When she went downstairs, the fruit punch bowl was growing and saying, "Drink me, drink me, drink me!" Then Lisa danced with the fruit punch bowl. She felt a sudden drop and heard the crow of the rooster. Lisa woke up with all of her friends. She told them about all of the fun they missed. She began to look puzzled when her friends told her it was a dream. Then, Lisa believed her friends and ate her breakfast.

The lost English paper

One morning I woke up and couldn't find my English paper. I looked for it upstairs and down. I still couldn't find it. I decided that I would have to run away. I couldn't write another paper because I didn't have time. I packed up all my stuff and left. I took the train as far as I could go. I had no idea where I was.

I am about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, with a large build. I have brownish glasses that match my auburn red hair. I have freckles all over my face. I have brown eyes and light-colored skin. I am wearing my black pants with a mint green sweatshirt and white sneakers.

Here are some habits that I hope will help Agent 006 find me. I am forever biting my fingernails, tapping my feet, snapping my gum, and I also scuff my feet when I walk.

I am most likely to be seen in a pizza place, a Chinese restaurant, or a mall. Two other places I might be found are an ice cream place or a bowling alley.

I would probably be looking for a place to eat, or sleep. I slept on a park bench. When I woke up I went out to try to find a job. I went to a Burger King in the center of town and applied for a job. I got the job because they were short of help. Two reasons for working there were (1) you get a discount on food, and (2) a girl there offered to let me stay with her until I got enough money to go home. My working hours are from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

I had called my Aunt Kathleen to ask her to tell my family how I was and to ask how they were. I soon had enough money to take the train home. I said goodbye to the people I had met and headed for the train station. I decided that loosing one English paper wasn't worth running away.

Tewksbury Baptist Church plans craft show

Once again the First Baptist Church of Tewksbury is planning a craft show for November 7, 1987 at the church on Andover Street. The committee is hoping to find individuals from our area who are interested in renting a space to show the finished products of their talents and hobbies.

Craft shows are fast becoming a way to earn extra money for many families or a very needed second income. The First Baptist Church has sponsored these shows each year with great success, and are planning to expand the number of spaces available so that many more individuals may enjoy the benefits of displaying and selling their products.

Anyone interested in being part of the craft show and wishing to reserve a space should contact the First Baptist Church committee by calling Hazel at 851-6174 or Gerry at 851-9463 as soon as possible so that their preferred space can be reserved.

All spaces will be rented on a first come, first served basis at the cost of $25 for an eight foot space. Some tables will be available to rent if needed.

Zero-interest loans for Tewksbury residents

Over 8,000 Massachusetts residents have already taken their first step toward getting their share of restitution money given to the Commonwealth by the Exxon Corporation. Fifteen million dollars of those funds are available to people through a zero-interest home energy loan program called Home Energy Assistance Team (H.E.A.T.). The program is the first of its kind to offer subsidies to moderate-income households ($51,000 gross annual income for a household of four) and at least 80 percent of the households in Massachusetts should qualify

In Tewksbury, Mass-Save, a non-profit energy conservation organization, administers the zero-interest loan program

The program's popularity stems from a simple application process and the double savings that result from the combination of fuel savings and the interest-free loan. So far, participants have saved an average of $1,840 in interest charges per loan, while saving up to 26 percent in fuel charges, for example, after installing attic insulation. The state energy office, who sponsors the program, estimates that replacing your heating system can save 11 to 17 percent on your annual heating bill, while storm windows can save nine to 16 percent. These improvements also add equity to your home and increase comfort year-round.

H.E.A.T. will cover the interest costs on loans obtained for a variety of energy-related improvements, including furnace andboiler repairs and replacements, storm windows and doors, insulation and door and window improvements. In the Tewksbury area, new heating systems, insulation and window work are leading the list of H.E.A.T.-financed improvements.

Applications to the zero-interest loan program obtain a conventional home improvement loan from a participating lender, and H.E.A.T. pays up to $4,000, for five years, in interest charges directly to the lender. The borrower is responsible only for the amount borrowed, usually repaid on a monthly basis. The amount borrowed must total at least $1,000 to be H.E.A.T. eligible.

The first step of this program is to request a Mass-Save energy survey. The survey provides helpful suggestions and information on cost-effective energy improvements for your home. Mass-Save, a non-profit energy conservation organization, also administers the zero-interest loan program in Tewksbury. In Tewksbury, Mass-Save is sponsored by Mass. Electric Company and the Colonial Gas Company. Once you decide which improvements to make, call Mass-Save at 1-800-792-5250 for your H.E.A.T. application. When your application has been approved, you may solicit estimates from contractors and/or suppliers and then apply for the loan itself. Once the loan is approved, you and/or your contractors may begin work and you begin to save money on your fuel bills.

If your home needs a new heating system, windows, insulation or other energy-related work, H.E.A.T. can offer you a cost-effective way to finance these improvements. Call Mass-Save at 1-800-792-5260 for more information, and for your energy survey and H.E.A.T. application, and start saving on your heating bills this winter.

Small Business conference

State Rep. James R. Miceli has announced that several hundred small business owners, partners, and officers from throughout the Commonwealth will discuss mandated employee benefits, hazardous waste disposal, liability insurance and other important issues at an all-day State House Conference on Small Business, Wednesday, June 17 beginning at 8:45 a.m. at the World Trade Center, Boston.

Approximately 71 percent of the state's workforce is employed by small business.

"Small business owners and executives will find this a good opportunity to begin to develop a consensus on important issues affecting small businesses," said Rep. Miceli. "It will be the first step in putting together a small business agenda that will be presented to the Legislature and the Governor."

Edward Pendergast, chairman of Kennedy and Lehan, P.C., in Quincy, and appointed conference chairman by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, said that small business is "vital" to the state's economic health.

"We must work to ensure that government regulations and policies bolster and support and enhance the business sector's ability to grow," Pendergast said, "for in doing so, we'll be contributing not only to more jobs for the people of Massachusetts, but to a better and stronger state economy for years to come."

The conference agenda includes discussion of state government policies affecting small business; liability insurance, small business development, human resource development; and financing and innovation. Each group is expected to make recommendations at a plenary session following the day's activities. These issues will be developed from a survey of several thousand small business executives that is being conducted by the conference's planning committee.

Over 40 small business executives and other officials joined Pendergast in planning the conference Among them are: Massachusetts Economic Affairs Secretary Joseph D. Alviani; Gary A. Barron of Barron Real Estate in Brighton; John J. Curtin, Jr., of the F.H. Curtin Insurance Agency in Cambridge; Joseph S. Iandiorio, an attorney from Waltham; Theodore S. Borek, Jr., of Irema U.S.A. Ltd. in Chicopee; Alfred C. D'Alessandro of Aid-Pack, Inc., in Gloucester; Dr. Judith H. Obermayer of Obermayer Associates in Cambridge; Sally Jackson of Newton Jackson and Company in Boston; and Dennis O'Connor, an attorney with O'Connor, Broude and Snyder.

The conference will be conducted with the assistance of Massachusetts Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives, Massachusetts Businessman's Association, the National Federation of Independent Business; the Smaller Business Association of New England, Inc., and the Small Business Service Bureau, Inc.

Wildcats win opener

Coach Dick Scanlon's Wilmington Wildcats got off on the right track in their non-league baseball opener Friday, parlaying excellent pitching by Mark Eddy and timely hitting into a 4-3 victory at Wakefield.

Monday afternoon's home rematch with Wakefield was washed away as the Wildcats get set to open their Merrimack Valley Conference schedule next week.

Eddy pitched the first seven innings for Wilmington, allowing just five hits while walking only one in a promising 1987 debut.

The big blow of the afternoon was struck by Joe McMenimen who blasted a long double to score Dan Woods (single) with the winning run . It was McMenimen's second hit of the game.

Redmen trip Andover

The Redmen varsity baseball team split a pair of non-league games last week by beating rival Andover, 6-5 and losing to Marblehead Saturday, 7-3.

Tewksbury gave Andover a 3-0 lead early in the game and then rallied to come back strong with some timely hitting. Catcher Chris Mader hit a devastating blast to right-center for a triple to start the Redmen off with two runs in the fourth inning to make the score 3-2.

In the fifth inning, co-captain Pat Brooks started the inning with a solid single, Jay Rideout followed with a single, and co-captain Charlie Gath hammered a hard double to left for two more runs.

Mader was then intentionally walked, and DH Pete Frend slapped a single for another tally to make the score 5-3 Tewksbury.

Andover tied the game in the fifth at 5-5, but the Redmen hung tough, scoring the winning run in the seventh inning.

First baseman Rideout started the inning off with a walk, 3B Gath sacrificed him to second and Mader came through with a clutch single to center for the game winner.

Preparing the Wildcats

Wilmington High School softball coach Tom Mirasola has his squad fine tuned for the start of the Merrimack Valley Conference season this week. Monday's MVC openers were rained out.

Not running just yet

The Merrimack Valley Conference softball season openers were not off and running as the action in this photo of a game between Andover and Tewksbury depicts, but rained out Monday afternoon. Today (April 15) will mark the opening of the season.

Hayden contributes at Bentley

In just its' third year of existence, the Bentley College women's track program is still in the formative stages.

Wilmington's Andrea Hayden is an important contibutor to the team's formative years. Andrea, a former standout for coach Frank Kelley's Wildcats in the Merrimack Valley Conference, is a freshman distance runner for the Bentley College team.

Coach Barry Harwick enters the 1987 outdoor season with his largest squad ever, although the team is quite young with no seniors competing this spring. Regardless, Harwick is shooting for a top 10 finish in the ECAC Division II Championships.

During her first two collegiate seasons, juniors Teresa Kittredge has established herself as one of the premier runners in New England. The 1985 Northeast-8 cross country champion, she holds the school records in the 1,500 and 3,000 meters both indoors and outdoors.

TMHS girls upset Lowell

The Tewksbury High School girls' track team opened its' 1987 season last Friday with a stunning 73-62 upset over Lowell High School at Cawley Stadium.

Trailing 51-38 with only six events to go, the Tewksbury girls outscored the Red Raiders, 35-11 in the remainder of the meet. The thrill of victory was intensified by the fact that the boys team had also pulled off a "no one thought it was possible " win.

The signals were mixed as to what kind of day it would be for Tewksbury as the meet got under way. Standing for two hours outside the high school and missing lunch during the Friday afternoon bomb scare had not exactly put the team in the best frame of mind for competition.

However, Kerry Silk popped off a perfect long jump to win the event with a 15'1" leap, and Tricia Censullo heaved the javelin 100'1" to walk off with five points there.

On the other hand, Kristin Conley's fine 14'5" long jump left her three tiny inches short of second place, and Sandy Keon's 80'5" javelin toss left her but four inches from second place.

The picture started to brighten when the discus results came in. Sandy Keon, increasingly competent in her events, nailed down first place, and Tracey Abbott, who has just recently learned how to throw the disc, managed to take second.

Meanwhile, Kristin Conley was getting off some fine jumps to take second in the triple jump and Lisa Thayer was grabbing second in the high jump and third in the triple jump.

As the running events began, Tewksbury had 30 points, but needed 68 to win the meet. At first it seemed that points would be hard to come by. Jennifer Harmon ran a fine two mile, but had to settle for second place, while Chrissy Frotten ran a gutsy race to finish fourth.

Lowell's superstar Mercedes Milligan won the hurdles, but Traicia Censullo ran a strong race for second. Then Lowell grabbed one-two in the 100 meters and first in the mile, and it looked as though Tewksbury was dead in the water.

Lowell's 4 x 100 relay team was coming to the starting line. Anchored by Mercedes Milligan, they were one of the top teams in the state last year.

Suddenly, the roof fell in for Lowell. Their mighty relay team ran out of the exchange zone, giving Tewksbury the victory in that race.

The Tewksbury 300 meter hurdle threesome of Abbott, Claire Tremblay, and Conley grabbed 1-2-3. And then Kerry Silk and Krissie Connor blasted ahead of a whole horde of Lowell half milers to take first and second.

All Tewksbury needed to nail down victory was a second in the 220 or a win in the mile relay. They got both.

Justine Short got the honor of securing the win. She blasted off the turn in the 220 to pull away from the Lowell runners and pull in second just behind Tricia Hagler. The team went wild.

Two minutes later the scene was repeated as Kenn Coviello and Tim Boudreau charged home 1-2 to accomplish the same feat for the boys team.

The grand finale was a tremendous 4:29 effort in the mile relay. In spite of the fact that they had just finished exhausting races, Kerry Silk, Krissie Connor, Chris Blake and Stephanie Beaulieu put forth the kind of effort that was typical of the Tewksbury girls all afternoon. The meet was an upset because Tewksbury not only had the ability to win, they had the desire to win.

Sophomore pitcher David Boudreau picked up the win in relief, brilliantly shutting down Andover over the final two innings.

The Redmen then traveled to Marblehead on Saturday to go down in defeat by a score of 7-3, collecting only five hits for the afternoon.

Tewksbury struck for two early runs in the second inning with singles by Pat Brooks and DH/P Pete Frend after an infield error and walk.

The Redmen allowed five unearned runs in the middle innings with untimely errors throughout the game. The third and final run for Tewksbury came in the sixth when PH Brian Frietag's single was followed by an infield error, a walk, and an RBI walk to Gath with the bases loaded.

Tewksbury's only other two hits came on another single by Brooks (two hits), and a booming double by Mader, who had a tremendous game defensively, making three outstanding blocks of home plate and tagging out runners to keep the Redmen in the game early.

Pete Frend took over for starter and loser David Boudreau (1W-1L), with a superb effort, striking out nine batters of the possible 11 he faced in three and two-thirds innings.

The Redmen hosted non-league Chelsea Tuesday at Hazel Field before travelling to Chelsea Thursday (April 16, 3:30) for the rematch.

to teams from Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Monday morning, April 20, at 10:30, the Redmen host Westford Academy in a makeup meet. Wednesday morning, April 22 at 10:30, Billerica comes to Tewksbury for another tough conference cross-over meet between large and small schools.

This past Friday, the Redmen gave a performance that can only be classified as one of overachieving with a stunning 81-64 victory over a Lowell team that was predicted to challenge Chelmsford for the Large School championship title.

The Redmen, out of the Small School Division, won the meet with depth as they had eight first place finishes to Lowell's nine, 10 second place finishes to Lowell's five and 11 third place finishes to Lowell's four.

Outstanding performances were recorded by several individuals, the best coming from senior Eric Meininghaus who won the 110 meter high hurdles (17.5), the 300 meter intermediate hurdles (42.7) and took an impressive second place in the long jump.

Summary

Two mile: Robbie Busch ran away from his opponents in the second mile and won going away in 10.06.3. Sophomore Pat McCaffery gutted out a challenge to take third place.

100 meters: Senior Kenn Coviello ran away to a 12.2 victory. Third place was grabbed by sophomore Karl Bateson.

Mile: Freshmen ace distance runner Jeff Rideout came from 60 yards behind to go ahead of second place finisher K. Shaw of Lowell, only to lose in excellent time by one tenth of a second at the finish.

4 x 100 relay: Tewksbury took advantage of a Lowell dropped baton to get the victory in 49.7. The relay team consisted of Dave McSweeney, Jeff Stone, Derek Doherty and Brian Aylward.

440 yard: Senior Tim Boudreau challenged Lowell middle distance ace D. Lamarre to the finish but was edged out in tremendous early season time. Senior Ron Maddox grabbed the third spot.

300 meter intermediate hurdles: Junior Dave McSweeney grabbed a come-from-behind third place finish to follow Meininghaus' first place finish.

880 yard: In a great race right to the finish, senior tri-captain Timmy McCaffery was edged in a race won in 2.01.0. In the race for third place, junior Derek Doherty came from 50 yards back to edge out his Lowell opponent.

200 yard: Tewksbury clinched the victory in this race, as Coviello and Boudreau raced each other to the wire and gave the Redmen a 1-2 finish. The winning time was 24.1.

Mile relay: Tewksbury trailed after the first leg, but had a good lead after senior Ronny Maddox passed his opponent on the back straightaway and gave junior Mike Hennessy the lead to start the third leg.

Maddox, Hennessy, Rideout and tri-captain Robbie Buisch were the winning team in a 3.51.5 time.

Field events

Shot put: Junior Chris Macie took second place by a quarter of an inch over his Lowell counterpart in a good effort.

High jump: Timmy Boudreau and Mike Hennessy offset the Lowell winning high jump by taking second and third place respectively, beating out a second talented Lowell jumper.

Discus: Senior Brian Donahue and junior Danny Britten gave the Redmen another 2-3 finish respectively, again giving the Redmen unexpected points.

Pole vault: The 2-3 finish by juniors Jeff Stone and Bill Donahue gave the Redmen four more points. Both boys turned in personal bests, something that was happening all afternoon.

Triple jump: Brian Aylward second and Joe Andriolo third, both personal bests, again would offset a Lowell first place finish.

Javelin: This event epitomized the story of the meet, as tri-captain Dave French had an off-day, but the work with his teammates during practice paid off, as Tom Cannarelli, a sophomore, (131'3"); Jim Marsh, a senior and Dave McSweeney, a junior, were able to sweep the event.

It's uncertain how much Kittredge will be able to run this spring. A stress fracture plagued her during the indoor season, but if she recovers, she could place in the 3,000 at the New Englands.

Sophomore Kathy Fitzgibbons has recovered from a similar injury suffered during the cross country season and could break Kittredge's school record in the 1,500.

Another sophomore expected to have a good spring is Mary-Ellen DeRocher who reached the finals of the indoor New Englands in the 1,000 meters.

Sprinters Jennifer Conroy and Sheryl Spratt should break or establish several Bentley standards this spring. Indoors, Conroy, a freshman, set records in the 55, 300 and 400 meters while Spratt, a sophomore, did the same in the 200 meters.

In the field events, sophomore Ann-Marie Burke will compete in the triple jump, while classmate Chris Reagan will likely participate in the hepthalon. The two-day seven event competition includes the 100 meter hurdles, high jump, shot put, 200 meter dash, long jump, javelin and 800 meter run.

Thanks

Dear Rick:

On behalf of Bentley College we would sincerely like to thank everyone who participated (coaches, players, fans) in the Wildcat Tournament held here at Bentley.

Directors Paul Cardello, Paul Gargan, Bill Driscoll and Joe Higgins did an outstanding job with organization. The coaches were all extremely cooperative, and the players and fans more enthusiastic than we expected.

We're all looking forward to hosting this event next year.

Sincerely,
Frank Sullivan
Bentley Head Basketball Coach

Injuries, bench woes produce early exit

Some thoughts while dodging the rain, hail and snow Monday afternoon.

Don't look for the Boston Celtics to repeat as World Champions in 1987. The recent problems on the road, the nagging injuries to Kevin McHale (feet, ankles), Robert Parish (elbow) and Dennis Johnson (shoulder) and the surge of the young Atlanta Hawks (22 wins in last 26 games) paint a bleak picture indeed for the defending champs.

The bench has been nonexistent for much of the season, and that only adds to coach K.C. Jones' worries. The Celtics' basic philosophy of going gung-ho to win every regular season game might also be their undoing this season, although it is hard to find fault with an organization that has won 16 world championships.

Boston will get past either Indiana or Chicago in the first round, but it will be a major struggle should they encounter the Hawks in round two.

Don't look for either Philadelphia or Washington to emerge victorious from struggles with Detroit or Milwaukee.

The second round is obviously the key round for the Celtics. Should they get past Atlanta, then they could claw their way to the finals again. But they will not defeat the Lakers this year. No bench and a tired starting five means Most Valuable Player Magic Johnson and the Lakers will lay claim to the crown for at least this season.

TMHS future bright

The Tewksbury junior varsity basketball team under coach Paul Garrity has won over 30 games the past two season to give varsity coach Bob Melillo plenty of help for the Redmen roundball future.

"This is our second straight strong season (18-2 last year, unbeaten in Small School play in 1987), and many kids have really played hard and shown improvement," noted Garrity.

"One of our captains this past season was Scott Niles, a 6'1" junior forward who is a real leader," offered the TMHS coach.

"Peter Frend (tri-captain) was our point guard and he's also spent some time with the varsity. He's a 5'9" junior and was our best shooter this season."

"Chris Stys was our other tri-captain. He's a 5'11" sophomore guard, a good penetrator and a tremendous, hard-nosed defensive player."

Garrity went on to mention several players who could move up to form the TMHS varsity nucleus along with the three junior varsity tri-captains.

Center Joe Andriolo, a 6'3" junior center, was the team's strongest and most consistent rebounder.

Sophomores Rob Williams, Ted Sullivan and Tom Bradley all played key roles for the junior Redmen along with junior Brian Hanrahan who moved into the starting lineup after missing the month of December with a broken foot.

"Overall our best player was 6'3" sophomore center Jeff Parsons," offered Garrity. "Jeff was our leading scorer and rebounder until he was brought up to the varsity late in the season. He's played very well with them, and for us he controlled all of the close games with his great leaping ability."

Juniors Dean Graffeo, Jim Sullivan and Mike Hennessy have dropped down from the varsity to get some valuable playing time, and all performed very well according to Garrity.

So despite graduating four-year starter and all-star guard Tim Boudreau, the talent appears to be there for another Tewksbury run at that ever elusive tournament berth.

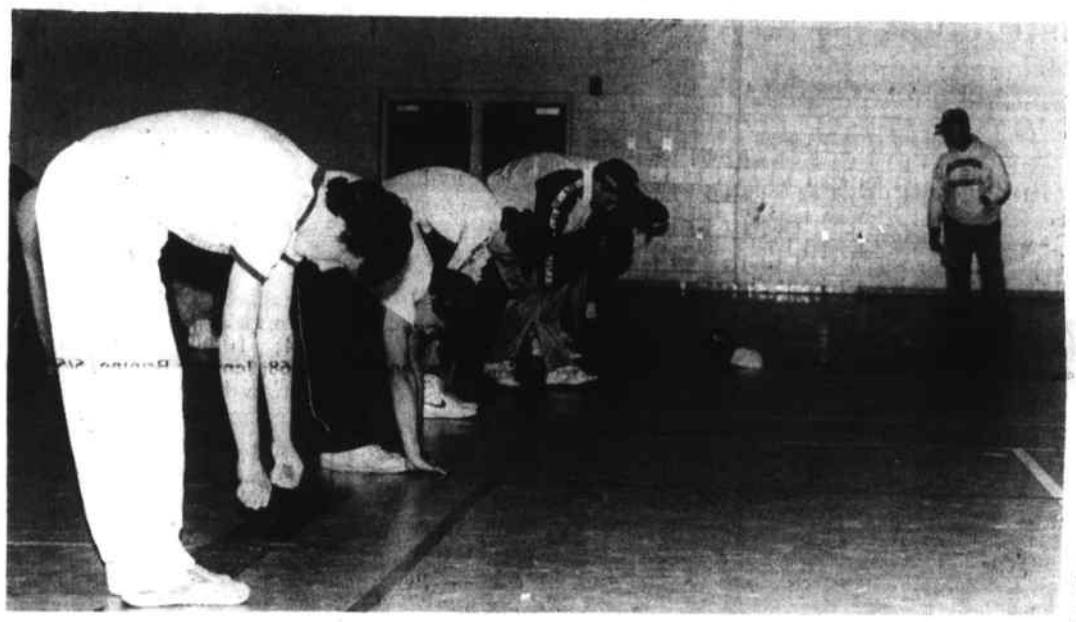

Bruins don't learn

The Boston Bruins and their fans still think that you win hockey games by planting people into the ice surface and smashing teams into submission. This team needs defensemen that can move the puck and forwards that can find ways to create some offense. Namely score, especially on the powerplay.

Redmen need solid pitching

The Tewksbury High School softball squad will need solid pitching that was provided last year by Lori Zotto if they are to qualify for another Eastern Massachusetts' tournament berth.

TMHS baseball tunes up

Tewksbury High School baseball captain Pat Brooks (foreground) and coach Bob Ware (background) are tuning up with a pair of non-league games with Chelsea this week.

Bay State Games Scholarship

Bank of Boston, presenting sponsor of the Bay State Games, is offering $14,000 in scholarships toward higher education to high school juniors entered in the 1987 Bay State Games.

The scholarships will be awarded to two state-wide finalists and six regional semifinalists who best exemplify the "Lead By Example" theme.

The Lead by Example Scholarships are distinguishable from other such awards in that Bank of Boston and the Bay State Games seek to recognize not just the best athletes and the best students, but young peopale who have demonstrated leadership in their school, in athletics and in their community.

"We felt there was a real need for a scholarship of this type," said Bay State Games Executive Director, Doug Arnot. "We hope to send a message to the state's youth that effort, dedication, and being an outstanding citizen are as worthy of recognition as being a top scholar or athlete."

Applications for the scholarship are available at all high school principals' and athletic directors' offices and high school guidance departments throughout Massachusetts.

Scholarships may also be obtained by writing to the Bay State Games at P.O. Box 8336, Boston, MA. 02114.

All Lead by Example Scholarship applications must be received at the Bay State Games office by May 15, 1987. Winners will be announced at the Bay State Games opening ceremony on July 10, 1987.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

Three interesting bits of fishing-related news appeared recently on the Tewksbury side of the house (sorry Wilmington).

(1) State Rep. Jim Miceli visited Long Pond in Tewksbury recently to take a look at the pond. Miceli convinced the Commonwealth to spend $20,000 for an engineering study, leading to an eventual clean-up of the weed-choked pond. The study should be conducted over the next few months, and the clean-up will begin much further down the road.

(2) Tewksbury Planning Director Charlie Frederiksen mentioned in passing recently that a parcel of land on along the Merrimack River was being considered for a park and public boat launch. Charlie stated that the boat-ramp discussion was purely casual, but this one could be a biggie ...

The Northern Middlesex Area Commission has been reviewing a possible clean-up of the Merrimack between Lawrence and Lowell, to include the mouth of the Concord River. The clean-up is geared toward making that stretch of river navigable, to open it up for recreational boating, fishing, etc.

At present, the Merrimack River between the Sister Cities is almost unused. Tewksbury has an intake for the new water plant on that stretch of water, but there isn't much else except a float-plane takeoff strip. Just about the only boat launch now in use is the footing for the I-93, just up the road from Bea's sandwich shop in Methuen. For Tewksbury to build a public boat launch on that part of the river would be superb.

However, Charlie also mentioned that the current owner of the land is thinking of putting condos there, and he said it's the only piece of river left that borders Tewksbury. This one will be watched closely.

(3) A recent meeting of the Tewksbury Conservation Commission turned up a choice tidbit, courtesy of commission member Pete Peters. The meeting involved discussion of building a few more buildings on the shore of Ames Pond.

Also at the meeting were reps from Metropolitan Insurance ("Met Life"), the current owners of Ames Pond.

Bob Emslie, the project manager for the Met Life work now construction, told the Conservation Commission that he "turns pale" whenever he thinks of people ice fishing on Ames Pond. (Two ice fishing tournaments were held there this year.) His statement was based upon the fact that Met Life could be sued for a bundle if anyone got hurt there, which is why the pond has been posted as "No Trespassing."

Emslie also said that Met Life's "Risk Management Group" has been having fits at the thought of the pond being used by the public.

That's when Pete Peters (Bless him!) mentioned that the town might consider taking ownership of Ames Pond. Emslie said Met Life probably wouldn't mind handing over the pond, and he hinted at some kind of payment deal for the property, as long as the town also took responsibility for the dam at the south end of the pond. Met Life probably won't let the pond go without selling it, but it's a start.

So, the topic has been brought into the open, thanks to Commissioner Peters, and it's worth a lot of consideration. Tewksbury would love to have a public beach, and Ames is the best place (just about the only place) to put one. Besides, it's a sin to lose a good fishing pond just because a huge corporation is afraid of being sued.

So, three issues affecting local fishing have come over the horizon in Tewksbury, but all three are still up in the air. Watch this space for news updates as soon they happen.

Until then, the weather is nice, the ice is gone and the fish are getting lonely. Time to go fishin' ...

-- Tackle Box --

I hope you folks don't mind awfully much when I skip writing this column from time to time. Last week I was up to my knees in flood coverage, town meetings and other excellent excuses, and I just couldn't find time to write a column. I promise I'll try to keep my hookey-playing to a minimum.

The trout stocking program is on temporary hold, at least until the streams get back down to normal. (It's useless to pour trout into a flooded stream, only for them to end up flopping on somebody's lawn.) Word has it that the ponds are already stocked, however, and that secondary stockings will be happening soon.

An open-water fishing derby is scheduled for Sunday, May 3. The Club Fleur-de-Lis, on the shore of Long Pond in Tyngsboro, will be holding its first-ever derby at that pond from 7 a.m. until 2 p.m., and the entry fee is $10 a head. The Club is located off Nashua Road near the Dracut line, and there is a boat ramp on the premises. There will be a 3-ounce bonus added to all fish returned to the pond alive, and all entries must be alive when brought in. Call the Club at 649-7661 for more info. (As a helpful pointer, try the far ends of the pond for the best fishing.)

Rotary champs

Wilmington Rotary Club softball manager Ray McNamara (left) and Bob Cornish share a chuckle as they accept the trophy for winning the South Division in Rotary Division 793. The team will be looking to defend its' title this season.

Ice hockey tryouts

Boys' scholastic ice hockey has been added to the sports roster of the Bay State Games, taking place July 9-12 in Boston. Four regional teams of 20 players each will be selected at tryout sites around the state. The teams will practice in June and advance to round-robin competition at the Bay State Games Finals.

Harvard University Hockey Coach and former Olympian Bill Cleary heads up the Bay State games Ice Hockey Committee. "We had an outstanding list of nominees from which to choose our coaches," said Bill, "and we all expect some great competition for the spots on the regional teams. Ice hockey in the Bay State Games will be a great opportunity for high school players to earn added recognition and possibly open some doors for a few unrecognized talents," said Cleary.

Entry forms for the Bay State Games Ice Hockey competitions are available from all high school athletic directors, youth and hockey coaches or by calling the Bay State Games at (617) 727-3227.

Tryouts are open to all players up to and including juniors in high school. Entry forms must be received at the Bay State Games office no later than May 1, 1987.

Boat show

"Opening Day on Narragansett Bay," proclaims Rhode Island's Governor Edward d. DiPrete as the Newport Yachting Center opens its' gates for the fourth annual North American Small Boat Show, Friday through Sunday, May 15-17.

A more fitting celebration could not be found as thousands of sailing, rowing fishing and power boating enthusiasts converge in Newport to inaugurate a new boating season.

The North American Small Boat Show will open daily, May 15-17, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets at $6.00 for adults, $3.00 for children under 12 available at the gate. Further exhibitor and consumer inquiries may be directed to Show Manager Abby Murphy (401) 846-1600.

Bay State booklet

The Bay State Games, Massachusetts Olympic Sports Festival, announced its' fifth season this week with the release of the 1987 Bay State Games Entry Booklet. The booklet outlines the entry qualifications and tryout procedures for athletes in all 20 sports offered in the games.

In 1986, 10,000 athletes competed in regional tryouts across the state, vying for a spot in the Bay State Games Finals. This year, the tryout numbers should increase substantially with the addition of ice hockey, racquetball and women's open field hockey to the sport roster. The games return to Boston July 9-12, and will feature 4,500 of the state's very best high school and collegiate athletes at the finals.

Gold, silver and bronze medals are presented to the top finishers in each event.

For more entry information, contact the Bay State Games at (617) 727-3227.

Kids who like Phys. Ed.

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Listening to Physical Education (PE) Director Marc Alterio rave about the wonders and realities of Reading's PE program almost makes me want to take Phys. Ed. again.

Imagine a very shy sophomore girl, a 30 foot telephone pole, a one-foot platform at the top, and a trapeze - and you have the ingredients for Project Adventure, a course which every single sophomore takes, every other day. Willingly, I'm told. Alterio says, "I saw this student - fully supported, emotionally and physically by her peers and her teachers - jump off the platform to the trapeze eight to 10 feet away. Her response afterwards was If I can do this, I can do anything in my life.'

"Overcoming that hurdle produced a quantum leap in her personal development," he continues. "Just as important as her sense of accomplishment is the pride of the students surrounding and supporting her. They had a very strong tie-in to her success because they were part of it."

Reading Memorial High School (RMHS) has one of the few PE programs with separate, sequential activities for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors/seniors. All high school students take PE every other day in the six-day class cycle. Teacher Ted Bryson says, "Our programs foster student success, achievement, self-image, and self-reliance. The student not the teacher - is the center of the teaching/learning process."

How do "physically non-aggressive" kids reach the point where they can jump off a 30 foot pole, and where do they go from there?

The recent establishment of a fitness profile which will follow them in grades three through eight is an attempt to help children develop a realistic idea of their own fitness and physical capabilities. Alterio says, "Physical fitness testing reports the performances of those who are athletically inclined. It shows those not so inclined how they do in relation to superior athletes. In 'health-related fitness' we use the term 'assessment' instead of 'test,' which is often a once or twice a year affair. We try to have our assessment be progressive and as student-oriented as possible.

"By the time students come out of middle school, they should be able to be actively and regularly involved in self-testing activities - in cognitive, effective, and psycho-motor ways," he continues. "Their response to self-testing is terrific because they feel in command of and can shape their own performances. Assessments are done quickly and easily, regularly addressed in every class. We want to put some responsibility for their own personal fitness back on the students."

Woburn's history-Part I

The region's Great Lady

By JIM ROUILLARD

She owes her creation to a commission of seven, including a merchantman given to taking privateers and an historian who displayed an "extremely embittered" mind.

She is both the source of "Wonder-Working Providence," and the seat of many wonders -- including a report of innocent bigamy, and the trading of a wife for a yoke of oxen.

She has produced competent shoe-makers and courageous dissenters, and even, sometimes, the two in combination.

We've come, in short, to Woburn, a city which might well be called the regional mother lode of local history.

She provided, after all, haven and home to the author of the first published history of New England -- yielded a Count of the Holy Roman Empire -- and supplied a man who gave his name to a really big apple.

As for pronunciation, if you think of her as she was sometimes spelled in the early days, "Wooburn," you won't be branded an outlander.

In historical terms, the city of Woburn is truly the "grande dame" of the region -- not only because of her pre-eminent size in population or her lone status of city encircled by towns.

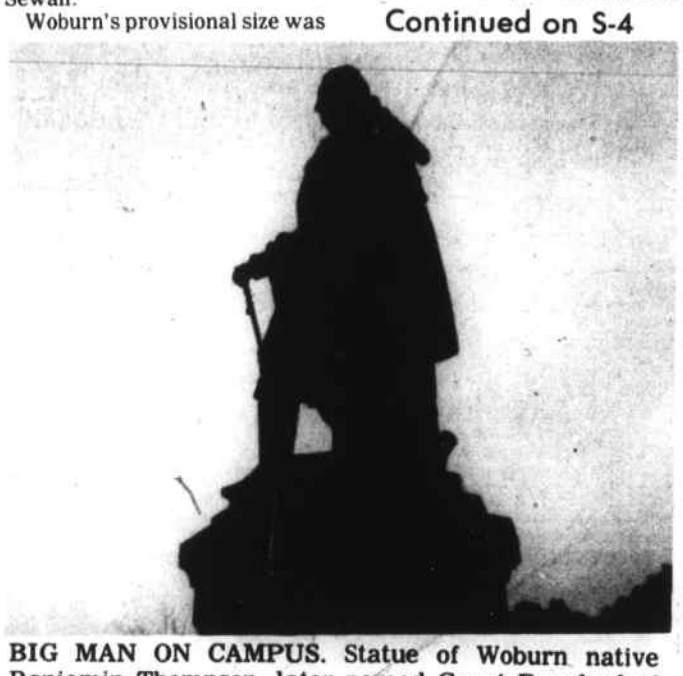

Her historical preponderance might be said to derive as well from the number of communities which she herself spawned -- with heavy reluctance in virtually every case -- as she relinquished in turn the Lands of Nod and Goshen (Wilmington), the Second parish or Shawshin (Burlington) and the once-upon-a-time section of Waterfield which we now call Winchester.

Conceived by a committee of 13 -- but brought to fruit by a commission of seven -- Woburn early got the nod to "elevate" herself to a township in 1640. This development emerged as an improvement on an original plan to establish a village more or less dependent on the parent colony: Charlestown, herself the mother of so many.

It was in households in the latter community that the idea of Charlestown Village, which was incorporated and christened Woburn in 1642, was first agitated. Preliminary thinking involved only the suggestion of a two-mile square district "with a view to the accommodation of (Charlestown's) increasing agricultural population," according to 19th-century Burlington historian Samuel Sewall.

Woburn's provisional size was later expanded to a total of four square miles, and the official committee which probed the town site in 1640, according to Ivan Sandrof, "pushed into wilderness and spent nights without shelter, 'whilst the rain

Cavities may becoming extinct

Twenty years ago, few youngsters could make it through adolescence without getting at least one cavity — usually many more. Today, however, the routine application of dental sealants has made cavities more of an exception and less of a rule. "Dental sealants for susceptible teeth may reduce cavities by as much as 90 percent," says Stephen Shusterman, D.M.D., dentist-in-chief at The Children's Hospital.

Dental sealants are plastic resins that are applied directly to the grooves and pits on the biting surfaces of newly erupted molars. The sealing material covers the biting surface of the molar and prevents cavity-causing foods from coming into direct contact with teeth.

"Sealants usually are applied when a child is 6 to 8 years old, the age at which the first permanent molars appear, and again when the child is 10 to 12 years old, the age at which the second permanent molars come in," Dr. Shusterman says.

The procedure for sealing a tooth is relatively simple, yet exacting, because each tooth must be prepared and sealed separately. Before a tooth is sealed, it is bathed in a mild acid solution. The acid cleans the surface and demineralizes a microthin layer of enamel, creating thousands of tiny indentations to which the sealant sticks. Next, the sealant, which resembles white or clear nail polish, is applied to the chewing surface of the tooth. Then, a beam of light is focused on the sealant for about 10 seconds to harden it.

"The procedure is not painful, but it can be slightly uncomfortable," says Dr. Shusterman. "This is because the tooth to be sealed must be isolated, usually using a device called a 'rubber dam,' a rubber membrane that is clamped to the tooth. Children may also find the aftertaste of the sealant unpleasant. The acid causes a sour taste in the mouth, and the sealant itself has a chemical taste. The aftertaste, however, usually disappears within an hour.

When properly applied, sealants can last an indefinite amount of time. Sometimes, however, they were away, or pieces of the resin break off

Poem

EASTER

"He is not here." an angel said.
"He is risen. He is not dead."
These words, said many years ago.
Give hope to all as we all know.
A wooden cross stood on a hill.
As sun and moon and stars stood still.
The darkness came and thunder roared.
As winds sounded their master chord.

Then one bright morn the world awoke.
From earthly sleep, as an angel spoke.
And gave good news for all to hear.
There's eternal life, no death to fear.
For Christ has said, 'Come follow me.
And live with Me eternally.'
So — rejoice on this, our Easter morn'
This is the day our faith is born."

By Anthony Manconi

Letter

To the editor:

Dan Ferullo, in his piece Wednesday about being handed an explicit pamphlet on AIDS, was alarmed. I'm alarmed too. But I'm alarmed not about AIDS Action Committee pamphlets, but by Mr. Ferullo's reaction: "I told him that if I were the father of a high school boy or girl, and he or she came home with one of those pamphlets, I'd either go to the school and blacken the principal's eye, or I'd go to the street corner where the pamphlet was passed out and decapitate the guy who handed it out." Whoa.

AIDS is not pretty or nice. Educators use a wide range of sexual terminology not as an excuse to "talk dirty," but because diverse groups of people with diverse vocabularies need to understand how to prevent the spread of AIDS. We are balancing "nasty" words against saving lives, and in this imperfect and unprepared world, I'm on the side of the lives.

Another paragraph that raised my eyebrows was the one about the minister who passed out condoms: "Didn't this minister realize he was handing them out to the wrong people? The members of his congregation are not likely to be the folks who hang out at the gay bars and discos on Saturday night. He would have gotten his message across better if he'd gone down to the nearest red-light district and passed them out to the people who hang out there." There is no "them" and "us" when it comes to AIDS. More than 1 million Americans are thought to be infected with the AIDS virus, and more than 90 percent of them do not know it. In New York City, AIDS is now the leading killer of women aged 25 to 29. AIDS does not hide out only in gay bars and discos, it lives with us in our churches, offices and schools.

I speak only for myself and not for my congregation, but I see the current phase of AIDS epidemic less as an opportunity for moralizing and more of an occasion for urgent education and compassion. We need, I believe, to say hello to the real world, and face it with courage and kindness.

The Rev. Jane Rzepka

Great Lady of the region

and snow did bedew their rocky beds.' "

By December of that year, Sewall wrote, interested parties in Charlestown began to meet "for consulting on the affairs of the contemplated town ... (and) admitted many to set down their dwellings in the proposed plantation."

But some of them, " 'being shallow in brayns, fell off afterwards.' "

A sufficient number of settlers, however, proved deep enough in brains to persevere, and built a bridge over the Aberjona River "for their own and the public accommodation," according to Sewall, "and perhaps too as an earnest of their determination to go up and possess the land," which he described as "unbroken, dreary forest ... (and) wild, uncultivated waste."

Sewall, as eminent a Victorian as one would ever wish to find -- to judge by the sincere combination of naivete and piety with which he writes -- displays an unconscious ambivalence of attitude not only toward the native Indians who once peopled Mishawum Neck (between the Charles and Mystic Rivers) and beyond -- but towards his own Puritan ancestors as well.

As for the natives, he declares, "These were perhaps Pawtucket Indians, so named from Pawtucket Falls in Lowell, which was their principal seat; or ... those Indians whom Prince calls Aberginians, and concerning whom he says that Charlestown Neck was full of them in 1628."

Sewall, as any historian of early New English history must, touches on Indian atrocities experienced by early Woburn settlers.

The community lost her share of men who left their farms, fought and died in King Philip's War. But the town, Sewall reports, was further visited "the following spring by two or three of their savage enemies upon a work of death, which they but too successfully accomplished.

"In the afternoon of April 10, 1676, as Mr. Samuel Richardson ... was employed in carting manure into his field ... he was surprised in looking towards his house, to see feathers flying about and other tokens of mischief within.

"Apprehending that Indians might be there, he hastened home, and there found two of his family murdered." The victims were his wife, Hannah, "who had been lately confined," and his son, Thomas, five. Further search revealed that the infant daughter, also named Hannah, had been killed:

"The nurse, it appeared, had snatched it up in her arms ... and hurried away to a garrison house ... But so closely was she pursued by the enemy, that finding she could not save herself and the babe too, she let the babe drop, and the Indians despatched it upon coming up."

There were other incidents. King Philip's War, a New England-wide 14-month struggle between settlers and natives in 1675-76, wrought tremendous havoc throughout the colonies.

"About 600 of the inhabitants of New England," according to historian James Trumbull, "the greatest part of whom were the flower and strength of the country, either fell in battle or were murdered by the enemy ... Twelve or thirteen towns in Massachusetts, Plymouth Colony and Rhode Island, were utterly destroyed ... About 600 buildings, chiefly dwelling units, were consumed with fire."

Puritan church and Puritan town, of course, interlocked, as Winchester Historian Henry Chapman phrased it -- and by 1672 the Woburn church "had grown so much in numbers that the original meeting-house had to be abandoned and a larger one built on the rising ground just off the northeastern corner of Woburn Common."

Early Woburn, comprising an intimately entwined community and church, at first made up mostly of farms, grew slowly and prospered -- in general, in quiet fashion.

"One episode, however, did disturb the serenity," according to Chapman. "That was the appearance within the church of ... 'the Anabaptist heresy.' ... the doctrine, now held by the great Baptist denomination everywhere, that baptism ought to be the rite confirming a conscious conversion, and that accordingly infants ought not to be baptized...

"But in 1670 the Puritan theocracy was still at the height of its power. Tolerance of religious views opposed to those of the clergy was unheard of. Dissenters, be they Baptists or Quakers, were handed over to the civil arm and sternly dealt with, for 'heresy' was a statutory offense as much as stealing or manslaughter."

No fewer than 13 Woburn men were summoned into court at Charlestown for "turning their backs on infant baptism." Several were among the original settlers of the town, including John and Francis Wyman, and Chapman tells us that two were sons of Captain Edward Johnson (author of "Wonder-Working Providence"):

"Most of the thirteen presented in court more or less willingly professed contrition, got off with a public admonition and returned, chastened, to full communion with the orthodox church ... When men of Puritan blood did not venture to stick to their convictions for fear of what might happen to them, in imprisonment, exile or sequestration of property, it is evident that the orthodox clergy wielded a political power it is difficult for us to imagine today."

One man, however, held out, Chapman reports: "John Russell stood out, and got sent to prison in consequence. He was a man of importance in Woburn, having been both a deacon and a selectman. How long he stayed in prison is uncertain. In the end he was released, still firm in the Baptist faith.

"He died not long after, but his son John, who had been summoned for the same offense, removed from Woburn, and became in 1679 preacher and pastor of the First Baptist Church in Boston ... This Russell, it seems, was a shoemaker by trade, and it was he whom the Rev. Increase Mather, that pillar of orthodoxy, had in mind when he fulminated a blast against the Baptists on the non-scriptural text ... 'Shoemaker, stick to your last.' "

Help low-income students?

"I tried so hard to make college work and the system kept failing me; finally I had to choose between decent child-care and achieving a good lifestyle through education, paying for my child's well-being came first," said Susan Blank-McKay, now ex-student from Quinsigamond Community College, mother of three and a member of the Women's Alliance, Framingham Center of Low-Income Students for Survival.

McKay's message of not being able to live and go to College was echoed again and again at the recent hearing in Gardner Auditorium before the Education Subcommittee of the State Legislature by low-income students in all different situations, single mothers, working class students, black and hispanic students.

Low-Income Students for Survival (LISS), a statewide organization, filed a bill in December to raise financial aid so that low income students could afford to get a college education and take part in the booming Massachusetts economy. "We deal with students from all over the state," Roberta Praeger, coordinator of LISS testified, "who are struggling just to eat and go to school. This bill is important because 65 percent of the 85 fastest growing jobs paying enough to support a family above the poverty level in Mass. requir a college education." Students presently receive on average only 60 percent of what they need to go to school after their own family contribution.

"Every student who wants or needs to go to college and is excluded means another nail in the coffin of U.S. leadership," said Jean McGuire, School Committee of Boston, to hundreds of students gathered on the State House steps at 9:30 for a short rally before walking together into the hearing. Also speaking were students from Bunker Hill Community College, Brockton State College, from State Student's Assoc. of Mass., legislative sponsors of the bill and others.

Kevin Sheehan of SSAM and student at Mass. Bay CC said: "We see this as an issues of justice for all; our studies show Colleges experiencing situations similar to the low-income student situation at UMass/Amherst applications for financial aid at UMass/Amherst for students with family income less than 30,000 per year are down 8 percent in two years; only 9 percent of black students who enter UMass/Amherst graduate."

Students expected a favorable report out for the bill. "The real battle will be in the budget process. People need to realize you can't talk about equal opportunity when people cannot even afford to get an education to apply for jobs with a living wage," said Michelle Burden, South Shore Chapter of Low-Income Students for Survival and single mother of one.

Save your families past

Every day, lives are becoming a thing of the past needlessly. Using methods as simple as keeping a diary or as modern as videotaping an autobiography, lives can be preserved for the future.

Years ago, families lived together or closer together. This made it possible for grandparents to tell stories of their lives on a daily basis. As families spread out geographically, this rich gift of personal history is being lost. Television has also replaced the tradition of conversation and storytelling as the most common form of entertainment.

The result is a loss of life — a loss of the opinions, values, and personality of those we care about.

"It takes a little effort, but it's possible to literally save these lives," says David Diotalevi, member of the Oral History Association and founder of Video Lifeportraits, a personal history service now offered to the general public. "It starts with an awareness of the value of our lives to others. Just think of what an experience it would be to know what our great-great-great-great grandparents looked like, sounded like, and thought. If we just take the time, our descendants can know each of us in just that way."

"Everyday items like photographs, letters, crafts, hobbies, and diaries can be used to preserve and organize a historical self," says Diotalevi. "I've even put together a simple, free fact sheet that shows how anyone can save their historical selves. I'd be happy to send it to anyone who sends me a self-addressed stamped envelope. Also, I'd be glad to share my ideas with any interested group with a half hour presentation I've prepared."

Video technology made recording a personal history even easier and more effective. Now the visual image and voice can be inexpensively preserved.

"I see video as a huge leap toward saving a person's past," states Diotalevi. "Unlike photographs, audio tapes, or even the old home movie, a video lifeportrait gives a whole picture of a person. From one's home, through conversations like I've developed, memories, accomplishments, hopes, and values can be saved forever."

For free information, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Video Lifeportraits, 3 Kellett Drive, Milford, Ma. 01757.

How not to be a lady

In the 1950's, it may have been fashionable for a lady to study proper etiquette; in the 1950's to take eloqution lessons; in the 1970's business, law and women's liberation were big; and now in the 1980's, it is time for women to learn "How Not To Be A Lady$"

The Regional Health Center in Wilmington will offer "How Not To Be A Lady" on Tuesdays, May 5 through June 2 from 7 to 9 p.m., to teach women how to prevent becoming a victim of crime by not appearing vulnerable and by taking precautions. The course includes understanding how criminals and con-artists operate and a session in reflexive defense training — a simple form of self- defense.

"How Not To Be A Lady" will be presented by Samantha Koumanelis, a 5- foot, 2-inch, 110-pound former undercover detective with the Boston Police Department. She also has a black belt in Karate.

Ms. Koumanelis has developed unique strategies for living more confidently and safely. She combines humor with past undercover experiences to present an informative and educational course.

The goal of the program is to promote self-confidence and develop safety strategies for women in their homes, on the streets and even in the workplace. Women are encouraged to take charge and use common sense to overcome threatening situations.

"How Not To Be A Lady" will include preventing handbag snatching; how to avoid dangerous situations or get out of one; checking out computer dating services; dealing with parking lots; and detecting rip-off schemes and con artists done over the phone, through the mail or in person.

"Most women steer away from tough-looking men with leather jackets," said Koumanelis, "but they don't give executive types a second thought. The ones in the three-piece suits are the worse offenders. They carry an air of respectability, and when the woman's defenses are down, that's when she gets into trouble."

Statistics indicate that one out of three women will be sexually molested in her lifetime. Although, she encourages her students not to become paranoid, just more aware of what's going on around them, Koumanelis tries to teach women to strike a balance between trusting and fear.

To register for this program or receive additional information, please call 657-3910, ext. 567. The course is limited to 14 participants.

Changes can benefit eyecare consumers

Not long ago, Massachusetts consumers' primary eye care options were arbitrarily limited. Elderly people who had visited an optometrist for years were often compelled to switch to an ophthalmologist when they reached the age of Medicare eligibility because Medicare covered ophthalmologists' services but not those of optometrists.

Meanwhile, a Massachusetts law forbade optometrists to use diagnostic agents such as eye drops during examinations, arbitrarily restricting their ability to diagnose eye health problems and other ailments, and forcing patients with suspected eye disorders to visit ophthalmologists even if that level of care was not medically necessary.

EASTER BASKET OF CHEER — Thinking of giving your favorite youngster a bunny, duckling or cute chick for Easter? If so, the Animal Rescue League of Boston urges you to select a stuffed toy rather than a live rabbit or chick, cute as they may look in the pet shop window. The sale of baby chicks and ducklings is illegal in Massachusetts, and, although baby rabbits can be purchased, very few people are informed or experienced enough to give rabbits the care they need if they are to survive. For those who would like to usher in spring by adding a live pet to their household, the Easter vacation is an ideal time to visit your nearest humane society or animal shelter, where so many appealing kittens and puppies, and lovable older animals as well, are waiting in need of new homes. The Animal Rescue League of Boston operates four animal adoption centers that are open seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. They are located in: Boston (corner of Arlington and Tremont streets, 426-9170), Brewster (Route 6A, 3981 Main St., 255-1030), Dedham (238 Pine St., 326-0729), and Salem (378 Highland Ave., 744-7910).

April 25th

Women in transition

The second annual Women in Transition conference will be held at Merrimack College on Saturday, April 25 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

It is now well established that "women in transition" has a broad meaning. The term was originally used to describe older women looking toward retirement problems. It is now recognized that women experience a variety of changes over the span of their adulthood. Some of these changes are critical and even traumatic, others are not.

Those who attended the successful 1986 conference will find a different set of issues addressed this year. In the morning, three meetings will cover the following: Domestic Violence — a workshop on battered women, a film and discussion of the issue of physical and mental abuse that shows how the abuser controls and suppresses the woman; Women and The Law — a discussion of divorce, separation, and child custody laws, entitlements if marital status changes, etc.; and Returning to School and Work — a panel discussion of the joys and difficulties involved. Counselors will be available.

The afternoon sessions will be: Legislation for Women — a look at legislation for women both in the Commonwealth and the Nation. Senator Patricia McGovern, Rep. Barbara Hildt, Rep. Susan Tucker and Susan Schaer, President of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, will address the issues and focus on how to make a difference in public policy; Careers in Later Life — a panel of women talking from experience about motivation, barriers and accomplishments; and Feminine Leadership — a discussion of the unique leadership styles that women bring to the workplace.

Each registrant may select one topic for the morning session and one for the afternoon hours.

This year, instead of a keynote speaker, California educator and actress, Dr. Miriam Reed will perform a monologue on the life of Elizabeth Cady Stanton at 1 p.m., and on Susan B. Anthony at 4 p.m.

Registration and coffee will be at 9 a.m. along with networking and exhibit tables, which will also continue during the lunch break from 12 noon to 2 p.m. A buffet lunch will be served at noon. The all inclusive cost is $15 for the day. Early pre-registration is essential for planning.

For registration form, send check made out to Merrimack College to Dr. Anne Arsenault, Div. of Continuing Education, Merrimack College, North Andover, Mass. 01845. For information locally, call Paula Towle at 944-6461.

North Suburban Chamber moves closer to route 128

The North Suburban Chamber of Commerce has signed a lease with Growth Real Estate Group of Chestnut Hill for 1,650 square feet of office space at Baldwin Park II in Woburn. The first class office building is located on Alfred Street at the intersections of routes 38 and 128.

The Chamber of Commerce's new offices will house administrative functions for the North suburban area, including the communities of Bedford, Billerica, Burlington, Carlisle, Concord, Lexington, Lincoln, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Wakefield, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn.

According to Robert A. Mercier, president of the North Suburban Chamber of Commerce, "The location of the office building is ideal for our purposes since the communities we represent are along 128."

Other tenants in the commercial complex include Bank Five and Computer Language Research, Inc./Fastax. At present, 25,800 square feet of the office building is available for rent.

Growth Real Estate Group develops and manages quality residential and commercial property throughout New England.

Interhostel can help adults over age 50

Across the United States, adults are returning to school. According to the 1984 U.S. Census, 14 percent of the adult population is now participating in adult education activities. This nationwide trend has not passed older adults by, and the popularity of the University of New Hampshire's Interhostel program is evidence of the growing interest in continuing studies.

Interhostel is a travel/study program for mature adults — ages 50 and older — who are active and intellectually curious. Now in its eighth year of existence, Interhostel offers 21 programs in 15 countries in Europe, the Carribean, China, and Australia.

NO TEXTS OR HOMEWORK

Using the world as a campus, Interhostel programs are conducted at host universities or other educational institutions. Participants live in modest quarters — often in student housing or small hotels — during their two-week stays in a selected country, attending lectures and discussion sessions presented by expert faculty on that country's history, politics, culture, and art. These presentations are illustrated by excursions to sites of cultural and historical interest.

WORLDWIDE FRIENDSHIPS

One of the most appealing aspects of Interhostel is the opportunity these programs afford adults to meet and share views with their peers in foreign countries. The results of these exchanges are an increased understanding and appreciation for other cultures, a wider world view, and an expanded circle of friends. One of Interhostel's past participants said: "I've been traveling for years, but now for the first time, I have real friends in foreign countries..."

NEW PROGRAMS IN CHINA, SPAIN

Each year, Interhostel adds some new locations to its list of programs. This summer and fall, participants will have the opportunity to live and study in Hangzhou, China and in Malaga, Spain. There are also programs scheduled for Yorkshire and London, England; Stirling, Scotland; Galway, Ireland; Trier, Germany; Zurich, Switzerland; and Melbourne, Australia. The cost of each program ($1400 for China and Australia and $1095 for all others) includes all ground transportation, meals, lodging, admissions to museums and other sites, and tuition at the host university.

For more information about Interhostel, or to receive a free Bulletin containing complete descriptions of the summer and fall programs, write Interhostel, Verrette House, 6 Garrison Avenue, Durham, N.H. 03824; or call (603) 862-1147 between 1:30 and 4 p.m. Eastern Time any weekday.

Tidbits

There's nothing new under the sun. Fossils found in Australia show that photosynthesis has been going on a lot longer than scientists once thought — about 700 million years longer! According to International Wildlife magazine, the new fossil evidence indicates that blue-green algae were producing oxygen through photosynthesis 3.5 billion years ago. That's just one billion years after the earth was formed.

Evil Dead II
Hollywood Shuffle

Evil Dead 2: Dead by Dawn Starring Bruce Campbell. Directed by Sam Raimi. Written by Raimi, Scott Spiegel. No rating, but no one under 17 admitted (profanity, extreme violence and gore).

It isn't often that a film comes along starring oozing zombies and malevolent spirits that makes you laugh. While director Sam Raimi, who co-wrote the script, doesn't scrimp on the gore, he's equally generous with the humor, making Evil Dead 2 one of the funniest scarefests since Raimi's first feature film, Evil Dead.

Dead 2 picks up where the original left off, in a deserted cabin where the humans are pitifully fighting for their lives against ancient, but newly resurrected, evil spirits. Bruce Campbell revives his role of Ash, a nice guy who can do wonders with a chain saw.

Not that saws, or even guns, help much. Seems some idiot scientist got his hands on the "Book of the Dead," an unusual little tome jacketed in human flesh, and mumbled a few fateful words that brought all these long departed and unhappy spirits back to look for tender young souls.

The story is as Fifties schlocky as you can get, but the effects and humor are pure Eighties. Raimi relies on animation, claymation, complete body make-up and blue screens. Eventually the special effects take on a humor all their own, simply because there are so many of them.

But just because this is a funny movie, don't think it's mainstream enough to take the kiddies to. There is enough blood and squishy green stuff to provide the more tender-hearted with a nightmare or two. But the rest of us seasoned moviegoers won't be able to stop laughing when Campbell plays a bloody game of Dr. Strangelove with his demon-infested right hand. Think about it, when was the last time you saw a phantasmagorical monster movie where the baddies went after a body part as a part of the game?

Hollywood Shuffle Starring Robert Townsend, Anne-Marie Johnson, Helen Martin. Directed and produced by Townsend. Written by Townsend, Keenen Ivory Wayans. Rated R (profanity).

Upon his decision to become an actor, Robert Townsend discovered that no matter the training and experience, black actors were required to mold themselves into certain stereotypes if they wanted to work. Townsend called this the Hollywood Shuffle. He then provided work for himself and other black actors by writing, producing and directing a delightful movie about this less-than-wonderful experience.

Townsend attacks with humor, not malice, but that doesn't mean his humor isn't without a few viscous barbs. Townsend is right on the money in 90 percent of the film, which chronicles the efforts of young Bobby Taylor as he tries to live with an uneasy conscience after taking a miserable role as a loud, flashy pimp. A lot of the film is made up of Taylor's daydreams, vignettes that include an acting school where black thespians learn how to walk and talk jive, from white instructors. Then there is "Sneaking into the Movies," a take-off on TV review shows where two young black men give a high-five sign to a movie starring pimp-zombies.

Townsend's major problem is that his transitions are too rough. The low budget also shows through on more than one occasion, but Townsend generally did a good job of working around, and within, his miniscule budget of $100,000. Also, if this very funny film could be made with almost no money or directing experience, his next film should be a masterpiece.

Making Mr. Right Starring Ann Magnuson, John Malkovich, Ben Masters, Glenne Headly. Directed by Susan Seidelman. Written by Floyd Byars, Laurie Frank. Rated PG-13 (mild profanity).

What a difference a script makes. You can have the best story in the world, lots of great visuals, a (mostly) invigorating cast and then foul it up with a script that is really little more than one tired joke. Case in point is Making Mr. Right, a good idea gone astray.

Susan Seidelman, who gave us the urban fairy tale Desperately Seeking Susan and the quirky Smithereens has taken past experience and come up with the Seidelman heroine - a slightly ditsy eccentric who can pull it all together if she has to. Ann Magnuson is perfection as the coppery-haired image consultant decked out in geometric fashions who thinks nothing of painting her nails on the way to work, while she's driving. Because Magnuson combines her character's dizziness with a kind of funky sophistication, she doesn't come across as a dated version of Lucille Ball, but is much more an Eighties creation. She is also the best part of the flick.

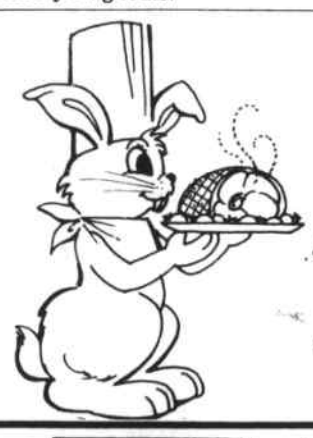

Magnuson, as Frankie Stone, has been hired to humanize an android called Ulysses, who is about to spend seven years alone in space. But before he goes, his sponsors want him to make a hit on the talk show circuit. Ulysses is the exact double of his creator, and both are played by a woefully miscast John Malkovich. He's wooden enough to be convincing as the robotic and the nerdy scientist, but there is no sex appeal there, which is the movie's biggest flaw, amongst others.

What is supposed to turn this into a screwball comedy is that the android is more human than his creator, and falls in love with Frankie. But it is never made clear what there is about him that she could love back. He is kind of sweetly naive, but that isn't enough. The film unravels badly for the last 30 minutes or so, not making coherent connections and jumping into the ending without bothering to fill us in such details as how the android could just walk out of his lab unnoticed, while wearing a tuxedo. Either too much was edited out or not enough put in, but no matter the reason, Making Mr. Right is not a good example of better loving through chemistry.

SHORT TAKES from S-11

The Secret of My Success is a shallow, mishmash of a movie that is supposed to be funny, but may actually prove an embarrassment to star Michael J. Fox in his later years. The characters are wooden, the gags weren't thought through and the ending came somewhere out of left field. This is what is known in the professional circle of film critics as a stupid movie. Rated PG-13 *

Beyond Therapy is a wild romp through the world of psychiatry and dependent patients that is very funny, but very strange. Director Robert Altman gave the film a stagey feel to it, and many of the actors rely on stilted mannerisms, but it all falls into place as a bisexual, his male lover, his girlfriend and his male lover's mother all battle out their problems with the help of two nutty shrinks. Rated R. * * *

Police Academy IV: Citizens on Patrol rehashes the same jokes we've seen three times before. They weren't funny in the last two episodes, and are even more tiresome in this cop caper. Rated PG. *

Waiting for the Moon is supposed to let us in on the personas of Gertrude Stein and her companion Alice B. Toklas, but instead leaves us with a sense of ennui, not understanding. Conspicuous and stilted, the film's unusual and stagey presentation becomes little more than a curiousity as it unravels, and is not the witty revolution in filmmaking that was obviously hoped for. Rated PG. * ½

Swimming to Cambodia is 90 minutes of Spaulding Gray's maniacal outlook on the society we live in. Aside from several cuts to his appearance in The Killing Fields, around which much of his very witty dialogue is focused, Gray sits at a desk with nothing more than a water glass before him and a couple of maps behind him as he spreads his most insightful gospel. Gray spent a lot of time searching for a "perfect moment" while filming in the east, but for us, this film is as near a perfect form of entertainment as most of us will ever encounter. * * * *

Blind Date is a sophomoric comedy that can't rise above the carefully planned and obviously orchestrated sight gags that encompass all of the humor in the film. Bruce Willis plays a man whose blind date could have been the poster child for AA, if only she could put the bottle down long enough to smile. And shame on director Blake Edwards for ruining Kim Basinger's one asset, her looks. She never could act, but smearing all that lipstick on her and muddying up her hair color was a sin. Rated PG-13. *

Raising Arizona is off-beat, upbeat, humorous, colorful and comes highly recommended. This is probably the only flick you'll ever see that's about parenting and kidnapping, all in the confines of a love story. This new concept in filmmaking successfully combines fantasy, romance, black comedy, brutality and several gurgling babies. Rated PG-13. * * * ½

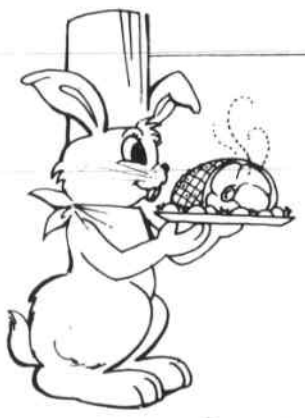

Burglar misses out at being a madcap comedy and is instead a crashing bore. Whoopi Goldberg plays a retired thief forced back into business by a sleazy cop, only to find herself involved in a counterfeit ring and several murders. The only funny scenes occur when Bob Goldthwait does his screaming act, but even he couldn't save this discombobulated film. Rated R. * ½

Working Girls is a compassionate, funny, realistic look at a day in the life of a prostitute that gives us an idea of her lifestyle without moralizing. While this is not a documentary, it has a very realistic feel to it, and is as entertaining as educational. No rating. * * * *

Tin Men are the names given to aluminum siding salesmen in the '60's, played by Danny Devito and Richard Dreyfuss. As touching as it is funny, the dialogue fairly crackles with fast-paced verbage and barbing insults before it segues into an endearing love story. What's unusual for a comedy is that the plot has as much heart as it has humor. Rated R. * * * ½

Scene of the Crime reveals Catherine Deneuve at her most sensual in this fascinating study of suppressed passions and murder, set against the golden backdrop of the French countryside. This is a film that can be taken on many levels, with its Oedipal undercurrents and air of mystery, so it should appeal to anyone not afraid of sub-titles. Rated R. * * * ½

Angel Heart is a strange, provocative, somewhat inaccessible film about a detective who crosses into the occult world of Cajun voodoo. It is certainly not going to be everyone's cup of tea, although there are a lot of things to like in this film, namely the acting and originality. Unfortunately, director Alan Parker pushes too hard, and it becomes more and more difficult to believe in the story and its characters. Rated R. * * *

Yankee Clipper's proud prow

Snow Squall bow will be feature piece for Portland museum

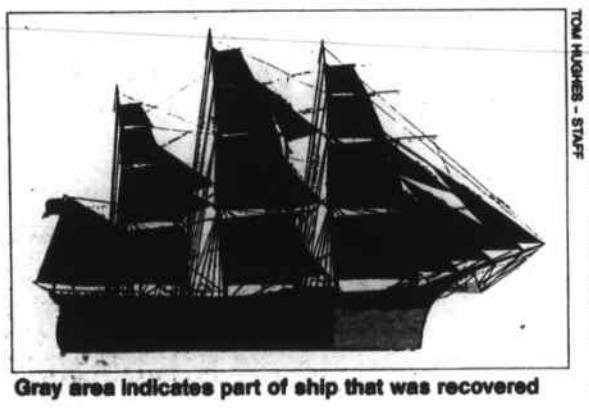

By Peter Tonge
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Portland, Maine.

SHE was one of the Concorde jets of her day – small, extraordinarily fast – and she traveled all over the globe.

She was a Yankee Clipper with a brief but glorious career on the high seas and more than a century under them. Now, part of Snow Squall, as she was christened, has an assured future as a museum piece in the city that launched her 136 years ago.

The sharp bow that gave Snow Squall such impressive speed under sail recently returned to Portland aboard the British freighter Asifi after 123 years in the waters off the Falklands, most of them as support for a pier in Port Stanley harbor. She was carrying gunpowder, along with other high value cargo, from New York, bound for San Francisco, when storm damage as she rounded Cape Horn forced her to turn back and make for the Falklands. Attempts to repair her proved futile and she slowly settled into the mud.

TOM HUGHES - STAFF

Gray area indicates part of ship that was recovered

The recovery of Snow Squall is significant because she is all that remains of some 400 clippers built in Yankee shipyards from New York to Portland during the 1850s. Their impressive speed enabled the United States to compete effectively in international trade and earned the respect of the British, whose dominance of the world sea lanes was unparalleled at the time.

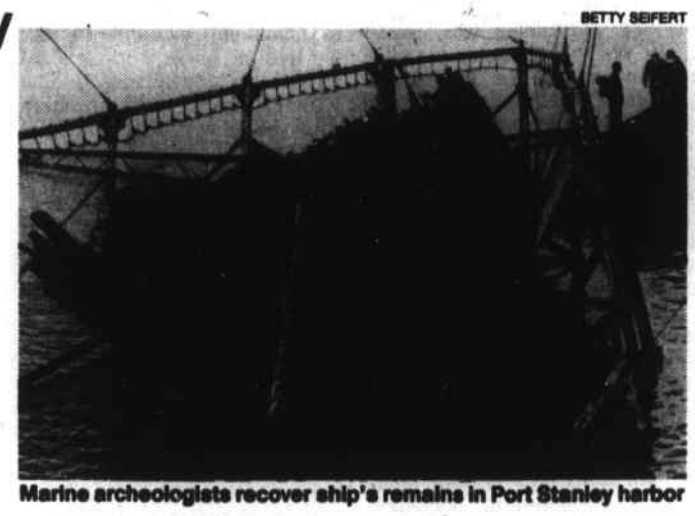

Clippers were spawned by the gold rush on the West coast and another in far-off Australia a few years later. The need to get people and high value cargoes from one part of the globe to another as fast as possible made speed paramount. Cargo space was sacrificed in a narrow hull that cut through the water rather than plowing through it as did the more blunt-nosed ships of the day.

Only about 100 "extreme clippers," such as the Snow Squall, were ever built. These ultra-sharp, concave-bowed ships could cover as many as 300 miles a day with a favorable wind. Passengers from New York would complete the 15,000 mile trip to San Francisco in 90 to 100 days, far sooner than by traveling overland where heat, cold, hostile Indians, and mosquitoes were constant threats. So valued was speed at the time that owners would sometimes recover their entire investment from freight rates on the very first trip. Snow Squall's $30,000 cost was a pittance for the number of voyages she made.

The clippers brought a new sense of romance and excitement to trading on the high seas. Clipper names included Witch of the Waves, Sea Prince, Flying Cloud, Wild Pidgeon, Comet, and, along with Snow Squall, the Black Squall. "Compare those," says Portland historian Bill Jordan "with the Claude B. Jones, typical of ships' names before that time."

Despite their trim beauty and the surrounding romance, clipper ships "were built fast and cheap," says

BETTY SEIFERT

Marine archeologists recover ship's remains in Port Stanley harbor

Fred Yalouris, a nautical archaeologist and project manager of the Snow Squall recovery. "Builders cut corners," he says. "Ten years out of a clipper was good. But they did have that bow!"

It was "that bow" and the prospect of learning how it was constructed that drew Dr. Yalouris, a Portland native, now with Harvard's Peabody Museum, eagerly into the project. No known drawings exist of clipper hull construction because boat builders of the time simply used shipwright tools to transfer lines from two-foot-long models to the full-sized craft.

Snow Squall was "rediscovered" in 1979 but no sooner had expeditions for her recovery begun in 1982, when Argentina invaded the Falklands. In the brief war that followed, a drifting barge rammed into the wreck, loosening many timbers.

But, what damaged the ship was good for the project. "The war put Snow Squall on the front page of American newspapers," Yalouris says. Fund contributions, which had been barely trickling in before that, became a steady stream.

So far, it has cost $500,000 to raise the Snow Squall and bring her back to Portland. About another million dollars will be needed to restore and preserve the timbers over the next few years, build the museum to house the hulk, and construct the model that will become an important part of any display.

David Switzer, a professor of history at Plymouth State College in Plymouth, N.H., and one of the divers on the project, describes the safe arrival of the Snow Squall bow in Portland as "thrilling." "We're rapidly becoming a non-maritime nation," Professor Switzer says, "so it's vital that we have this link with our maritime past."

Switzer describes the brief clipper era as "the last gasp of sail," before steel ships and steam-power took over, spurred on by an acute timber shortage in Britain. In fact, the first steam-sail steel ship was built in Britain six years before Snow Squall was launched, Yalouris points out.

Yet the British were so impressed by the American clippers that they built many of their own, primarily to bring tea from the Far East. The most famous of them all, the durable Cutty Sark, was built with steel ribs and wooden planking. She is moored today at Greenwich, England, a fully navigable museum piece and tourist attraction.

Protein myth

For many years protein has been the American Epitome of nutritional goodness. Research now suggests that eating too much protein may do more harm than good, according to Nancy C. Stutzman, Extension Home Economist with the Middlesex County Cooperative Extension, University of Massachusetts. Consuming large amounts of protein is now thought to contribute to osteoporosis, heart disease and certain cancers.

According to government statistics, on average, infants and children in the United States consume about twice the Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for protein. The average middle-aged man consumes 60 percent more than the recommended protein level; the average middle-aged woman about 25 percent more than recommended. And less than three percent of the population gets under two thirds of the RDA, (Two-thirds is generally considered adequate, because the RDAs are constructed with generous safety margins.)

TOO MUCH OF A GOOD THING? — Obviously, most Americans eat plenty of protein, and some of us probably eat far too much. Among other things, excess protein may increase the risk of osteoporosis-weak, fracture-prone bones. When people eat more protein, their kidneys excrete more calcium, the mineral that keeps bones strong.

THE HEART OF THE MATTER — It's taken the American public a while to grow accustomed to the idea that diet influences heart disease. And since studies first showed this to be true, the most obvious villains-saturated fat and cholesterol-have captured most of our attention. But excess animal protein may also play a role.

Studies of the diets and heart disease rates of different human populations point a warning finger at animal protein. Some of these studies found heart disease to be at least as strongly linked with animal protein in the diet as with animal fat.

1. Use meat and poultry as condiments, rather than as the centerpiece of each meal. Use small amounts to good advantage in stir-fried combination dishes, soups, stews, and casseroles.

2. Use cookbooks that feature interesting ways to prepare grains, legumes, pasta, and vegetables.

3. Eat at last one meal a day with little or no animal protein. Try a fresh vegetable salad for lunch; pasta with marinara sauce for dinner.

4. Snack on high-carbohydrate, low-protein foods, such as fresh and dried fruits, raw vegetable slices, wholegrain crackers, popcorn, and juices.

Retired Men's Club meeting

The Retired Men's Club of Wakefield was treated to two very interesting travelogues on Czechoslovakia and Rome, presented by John Vernon of Peabody and Helge Petersen of Lynn respectively, at their meeting on April 8. In both instances, the slides were unusual and introduced the audience to parts of the locations that are not always seen by the tourist. John Vernon had a most interesting commentary on life behind the Iron Curtain; he was impressed particularly with the cleanliness, the friendliness and courtesy of the people. Petersen's knowledge of the history of Rome was impressive and certainly lent interest to his presentation.

Visitors and new members were welcomed. Visitors included Abraham F. Simmons of North Reading, Tom Philbin and Lawrence J. Stiles of Reading, James J. McCarty of Burlington, Merrill R. Dowd of Stoneham, Clyde Barringer of Lynn and Attilio J. Nutile of Woburn. New members were John J. Killoran of Worcester, William J. Dooner of Melrose and Earl Richard of Lynnfield. The vice president of the Melrose Retired Men's Club invited the members of the Wakefield Club to attend their annual banquet. Twenty-two birthdays were celebrated. Door prizes were won by Anthony Catanzand of Reading and Fred Burdett of Woburn.

The newly formed Bridge Club is going well with meetings every Tuesday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Reading Senior Citizen Center at 52 Sanborn Street. The group welcomes all experienced players even if they have not played for several years. All levels except beginners are represented. The Melrose Men's Club donated some cards for the group.

The Stamp Club will meet at the Wakefield Public Library on April 21 at 1:30 p.m. The Travel Club will have its monthly meeting (every third Thursday) April 16. Signups are still being taken for the Le Grand Magic Show on May 3, the circus on May 4 and the Cape on April 28 and 29.

On April 21 at 9 a.m. the Camera Club will be entertained with a talk by William Contanche on "Ports Around the World." Both the Travel and Camera Clubs meet at the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield. The Bowling Club is preparing for its annual competition with the Newton Retired Men's Club on April 20 when 25 of the best bowlers from the two clubs will compete. Wakefield is currently in possession of the trophy.

The speaker for the next meeting on April 22 will be Ms. Lynne Ravenoe, head of the Community Health Department at Melrose Wakefield Hospital. All retired men within commuting distance of Wakefield are invited to visit and join. There are no dues and no sponsor is needed. The Hospitality Committee tries to help all newcomers get acquainted by seating them with members from their community. Come on down! The meeting is at the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield at 9 a.m.

Reading kids like phys. ed.

that success with middle school students is due to a very progressive curriculum reflecting their needs and the units of study in each grade level which have a unique sequence and purpose. "Word is out among college supervisors that Reading is a good place for student teachers to go because there's a lot of teaching happening here and a lot of good response from the students," she says. "We've had inquiries from Bridgewater, BU, Northeastern, and Salem State."

Alterio's approach toward the whole student is interdisciplinary and comprehensive. The freshman program is designed to incorporate a health-related practical path to fitness. "We'll use a lab approach so they can develop and maintain an understanding of themselves as physical beings," explains Alterio. "In two or three years, we'd like to fully implement the physiology of exercise with bicycle ergometers, measurement and assessment techniques, etc.

"We're looking for more and more ways to make academic connections between programs, to integrate the PE program into the general high school program, and by doing so, increase its credibility. For example, a physics teacher's expertise could help us teach the mechanics of how to perform some physical skills. We try to tie in the cognitive with the physical," he says.

Although it is "probably the most unusual PE experience a student will ever have," the sophomore Project Adventure's focus typifies Reading's entire PE program. "We support our student in a variety of ways and we expect our students to support one another," says Alterio. "A real symbiotic relationship between the students and the teachers occurs in Project Adventure. Students are challenged emotionally, physically and mentally. We always allow for individual differences among students, and for personal expression.

"Success and failure are less important than making an effort," he continues. "The basic foundation underlying the entire program is that those who make an effort are mutually supported in a trusting atmosphere. It's cooperative, non-competitive, based on initiative, and task and problem-solving techniques. We try to bring in the cognitive aspects of education all the time. Activities are presented so they express a strong concern for emotional and personal development, of our students and staff."

Juniors and seniors choose activities most appropriate to their needs from a variety of offerings such as archery, video workout, power volleyball, aerobic dance, ropes, tennis, etc. Alterio teaches sections of various courses "to test the waters along with the staff."

In fact, his teaching of a self-defense course developed by PE teacher (and football coach) Gary Nihan has already resulted in changes for supermarket employees in a neighboring town. Students came to class with concerns about the rule that employees park as far from the store as possible, leaving nearby spaces for customers. Alterio brought these concerns to the attention of the store manager, and the employee parking area is now highly visible, well-lighted, and secure. Alterio says, "In our self-defense course, we're very concerned with preventative measures, with being in appropriate places at appropriate times. What we ask kids to do in PE all the time is to be alert, use their heads, and think."

How do the kids themselves feel about the program? The PE staff addresses half the high school population each day, about 3500 student contacts per week, 56,000 per semester. The number of unexcused cuts is minimal. In a recent survey of juniors and seniors, 82 percent felt the program met almost everyone's needs. More than 60 percent felt that "physical education is fun, enjoyable, relaxing, a pleasant part of my school day." Alterio says, "We care and they care."

This attitude has translated itself from PE to sports. RMHS Principal Mark Piechota says, "This has perhaps been the most exciting and rewarding winter athletic season we've ever had. The dedication and hard work of our students has produced numerous champions and contending teams - track, gymnastics, basketball, wrestling, and hockey."

Everyone seems to have "bought into" the program - administration, staff, and students. Alterio explains, "We've established a program that has as its root the educational needs of the students at hand. That's the most important. Our staff is highly motivated and responsive to the changing needs of our society. Their professional development has been immense over the last eight years.

"Good PE programming should always be in a state of flux. It should be flexible enough to meet the changing needs of students," he says. "Would you watch television if the picture kept rolling and rolling? Of course you wouldn't. You'd get up and you'd adjust it. Well, when we see some minor glitches in our program or new directions to head in, we do some fine-tuning and we do it regularly.

"We monitor our program's performance at every opportunity. As soon as we finish a unit, we sit down and discuss it." he continues. "That kind of professional planning by our staff is most important. We want students to learn all they can about themselves so they can become better human beings through the medium of PE. Our thrust is to head in the direction of what's best for all our students at all times. That's what education is about."

"We're rather futuristic but at the same time realistic," he says, "and that's a very nice quality to be able to establish. The support we get from each other, from the whole administration and from the community makes a big difference. It makes everyone want to contribute more."

This philosophy on the parts of director and staff is working so well that it attracted much attention at the regional and state PE conferences where Alterio and Bryson recently presented workshops entitled "Our Students Want to Come to Physical Education." Several directors who attended the regional conference have already visited Reading. The state conference workshop drew 157 people, the most highly attended workshop there.

"One of the successes of our program is that it's very practical and very student-oriented," says Alterio. "We're concerned that our classes are meeting students' needs and we also give them choices in the program so they can buy into it a little bit."

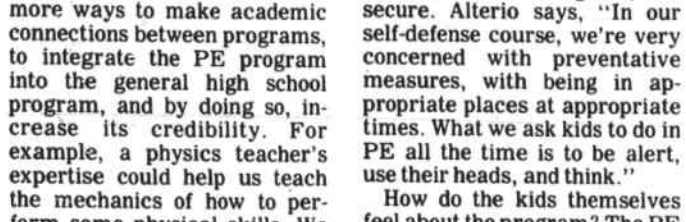

Believing that nothing they do should be taken for granted, Alterio is quick to praise his staff for their efforts. However, he also says, "My latest kick is that being adequate or good is no longer good enough. We have the resources to be outstanding and excellent. We're all here to do better and better for every single one of our kids. We keep raising our expectations - and the kids keep meeting them."

Ultimate Frisbee, Yoga, McWhipitt, CPR, Bag of Tricks! Reading's PE program is such a dramatic step forward from stereotypical, traditional programs that it makes me want to take Phys. Ed. again - almost.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

I never realized that there are so many "Townies" (people born and brought up in Charlestown) who are now living in the Middlesex East area. I wrote in Woodchips recently about William McCabe, of Charlestown, who was appointed Mass. Commissioner of Public Safety. I added as an afterthought that I am an "Honorary Townie," (thanks to Joseph Foley now of Tewksbury) by virtue of my 19 years in the Boston Naval Shipyard. Anyway, I received 24 letters from readers telling me that they came from Charlestown. My aunt, Mary Matthews, lived on Solley St. and was an active women's rights advocate. An uncle, Dan Delaney, was the hiring foreman on the piers and docks. He made it plain and simple — he would hire only Irishmen for his longhshoremen crew. One morning a young lad asked for a job. "Are you Irish? " bellowed Uncle Dan. "No," the young man replied, "but my grandmother is." "Good," shouted my uncle, "tell your grandmother to report for work on Pier 4 at five in the morning! "

My cousin, Maureen O'Donnell, was a red-headed firecracker. She came to me one day and said, "John Riley and Tommy O'Brien want to marry me, Woodchipper, who do you think the 'lucky' one will be? " I knew this young 'spitfire' from the day she was born, so I put my arm around her shoulders and said, "Maureen, John Riley will marry you and Tommy O'Brien will be the 'lucky' one." Two days before the marriage she ran to her mother in a panic saying that she just learned that John Riley didn't believe in Hell. Her mother Mary calmed her fears, saying, "That's okay, marry him anyway, between your father and I we'll convince him that there is a Hell." Well, they were married and it wasn't very long before the 'pitter patter' of little feet could be heard. Mice, in the kitchen pantry. Maureen woke John up at 2 in the morning saying, "Get up, get up, I can hear a mouse squeaking! " A tired Johnny opened one eye and shouted, "What the heck do you want me to do about it, get up and oil it? " A year later this lovely couple were blessed with a set of twins. "I'll bet," I told Johnny, "you will have a lot of trouble telling the twins apart." "There won't be any problem — one is a boy and the other one is a girl." I remember Uncle Dan's first car. Officer Tom O'Rourke hailed him to a stop on Bunker Hill St. and exclaimed, "Don't you know that your wife fell out of the car when you made a sharp turn from Elm St.? " "Is that what happened? Thank God, I thought I had gone deaf! "

When Kevin Harrington, a shipwright in the Navy Yard died, some of us went up to the second floor of a three-decker to pay our respects and offer our condolences to his widow. Joe Foley touched the deceased, then turned to Mrs. Harrington and said, "You know, he's still warm." "Hot or cold," she exclaimed, "he goes out at 9 in the morning." I don't think that you want this whole column to be about Charlestown, but I do want to make one thing perfectly clear, I love you "Townies," one and all.

Here's one for those of you who like puzzles: Two books, volume 1 and volume 2, are standing upright on a bookcase shelf in proper order. A bookworm started from the first page of volume 1 and continued to eat its way to the last page of volume 2. It takes the bookworm one minute for each page or cover. How long did it take to reach the last page of volume 2? Each book contains 100 pages. The answer, (after the next chip) will surprise you.

Howie Murphy, manager of Kelly's was trying to call his wife to notify her that he had to work late. It was an exercise in futility, for the phone gave him a busy signal for over twenty minutes. In desperation, he called the operator and asked her to "cut in" so he could get his important message to his wife. "Only in case of life or death are we permitted to do that sir," she said. "Okay," Howie shouted, "if it's my daughter Terrie who is tying up the phone I promise you there is going to be a murder! " The answer is 2 minutes - it has to travel through two book covers. The bookworm is already on page 1 of volume 1 and will be on the last page of volume 2 in two minutes. I won't try anymore, they are too tough even for me to write.

The best years of a man's life are when his children are too old to wake him up at night and too young to drive a car. Father Robert Doherty, of St. Margaret's Church in Burlington, has a wonderful sense of humor, and why not? This wonderful "Man of the Cloth" is Irish and, so was my mother. She could laugh at the trials and problems of life, then would "carry on." My father, on the other hand, would "fall apart" if the old clunker of a car of his got a flat tire. When I was born my parents were trying to agree on a name for me. First of all, I want to explain that I wasn't any beauty then and far less now. My father took one look at me and shouted, "Oh, let's call it quits! " They did after seven more.

Woodchips Personality Winners for this week: Margaret Scully of Winchester, Fr. Martin Ryan S.J. of Burlington, Richard Cushman, Woburn, Frank Mazzoni, Wilmington, May Holland, Winchester, Leo Ward, Woburn, Buddy and Eleanor Stratton, N. Reading, Bill Cerretani, Stoneham, Connie Johnson, Honeycomb Wakefield, Russ Rebidue, Lynnfield, Grace Boutwell, Woburn, Gail O'Malley, Winchester, Cathy Pacini, Wilmington, Fred Neilson and Betty Spahl, Wilmington and Edmund Baratta, of Winchester. Parents know very well that life is not a bowl of cherries, it's more like a "bunch of raisins." Raising children, raising money for the rent or taxes and raising money for college tuition, ad infinitum.

Folks, I have been writing Woodchips for over nine years. In that time, I have received very few complimentary letters. It, therefore, gives me great pleasure to tell you how elated, overjoyed and honored I am to have received a wonderful letter from His Eminence, Bernard Cardinal Law, Archbishop of Boston. In one of the sentences he wrote, "God has blessed you with a talent for writing and I enjoyed reading your poems." May I humbly say, "Thank you for your kind words, your Eminence." I thank God for the wonderful talent and I hope to share this "Gift" with all my readers. I also thank God for sending to the Diocese of Boston, a "Charismatic Emissary" of Peace, Love and Understanding, His Eminence, Bernard Cardinal Law D.D. Archbishop of Boston.

Choose hotel for safety

With the New Year's Eve deaths of 96 people in San Juan's Dupont Plaza Hotel still fresh in mind, travelers are being urged to select hotels with extreme caution.

The Dictograph Security Information Bureau warned that the newest and most modern-looking hotels and motels are not necessarily the safest.

The bureau, located in Florham Park, N.J., cautioned that travelers only should patronize hotels that have passed their most recent fire code inspections and to choose rooms on lower floors with exterior balconies.

"Fire code information is readily available at local fire departments," said bureau spokesman Michael E. Horne. "It is well worth the extra time to obtain such information."

The bureau recommends rooms on lower floors because of their nearness to lobbies in cases of emergency. Also, elevators on lower floors are less likely to make a lone guest a target for attack because they are less likely to be empty, said Horne.

Exterior balconies offer a chance to escape deadly, superheated gases produced by a fire if other escape routes are blocked, he said. Many hotel guests have escaped fire injury or death by awaiting help from balconies while their rooms became enveloped in smoke.

In case of fire, the bureau offered these suggestions:

Never open a door without first checking for smoke or heat.

If smoke is present, walk in a crouched position. Do not crawl on the floor! Poisonous, superheated air tends to rise, but the safest air space is about three feet from the floor.

Tie a wet towel around your nose and mouth to help you breathe.

The bureau also offered these additional tips for protecting yourself from thieves or other intruders in hotels:

Keep spare cash in a hotel safe-deposit box.

Travel with a rubber doorstop which can be pushed securely under your hotel room door from the inside to provide an extra measure of protection while you sleep.

The Dictograph Security Information Bureau is a service of Dictograph Security Systems, one of the nation's oldest and largest security alarm companies.

HEMLOCK or PINE? RED or BROWN?
THE FACTS ABOUT BARK MULCH

To make a good mulch, bark should be aged at least 3 mos. The bark that comes off the logs in cold weather so called "Winter Bark" is the best. Hemlock turns red as it ages. So does red pine and red birch. Pine bark turns brown and is heavier than hemlock. Although hemlock bark is colorful, it is comparatively light and fluffy and used by itself it will become dry and lose its color. Pine, however, holds more water, controls weed better, and lasts longer. The best "RED BARK MULCH" (a term we originated some years ago) is a well planned mixture of both hemlock and pine in the proper proportions for best color and best landscaping qualities. We stockpile both hemlock and pine all winter and in the spring offer a premium "RED BARK MULCH" at no extra charge.

CONVERTIBLE CELEBRATED

The Museum of Transportation, Larz Anderson Park, 15 Newton St., Brookline, hosts "Ragtops to Riches: Great American Convertibles," through September 13. The exhibit traces the evolution of the "open" car from the turn-of-the-century when all cars were topless, to the elegant streamlined styling of the '30s, to the dream convertibles of the '80s. Features boxy, finny, fantastic autos and hands-on activities. The cars, in time-related settings, are surrounded by period artifacts; vintage radios and television sets. Charles Eames and Gilbert Rohde chairs. Russel Wright dishware and enameled roadside signs all reflect the culture of their times. Open Wednesday through Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission $3; Seniors, students with ID, children $2; under 5, free. Call 522-6140.

CROSSWOOD PUZZLE TOURNEY

Southeastern New England's popular Spring Crosswood Puzzle Tourney will be held on April 25 this year, according to an announcement by Hope Atkinson, veteran chairman of the event.

Sponsored annually by Friends of the Dartmouth MA. Libraries, this month's contest will be the eighth in the series which each year attracts increasing numbers of amateur puzzle solvers from a wide geographic region.

As heretofore, the tournament will be conducted at Southworth Library, 732 Dartmouth St., So. Darthmouth, MA, starting at 9 a.m., with three puzzles to be solved by each participant during the forenoon. Varying time limits are specified for the solving of the puzzles, depending on degrees of difficulty.

Due to limited seating capacity, advance registration is urged, while advance reservations for the luncheon are required. Registration and reservations forms, travel directions and additional information may be obtained by mail to P.O. Box 11, Dartmouth, MA. 02714, or by phone to (617) 636-2215.

From puzzles to music, from '50's convertibles to hometown events, COMING ATTRACTIONS was a little something for everyone. However, we welcome notice of events of interest to all. If you have knowledge of a happening, write, care of the local newspapers and tell us all about it. We welcome even little-known events.

Secretary's job takes last place in survey

HELP WANTED: SECRETARY. More than 2,000 secretarial students wouldn't take a second look at an ad with this copy. The reason? According to a recent survey conducted by Katharine Gibbs School, the nation's leading secretarial business school, more than 75 percent of students polled preferred seven other titles over the title of "secretary." Of the eight titles from which the students chose, "executive secretary" ranked as the most desirable title, with "executive assistant" and "administrative coordinator" close behind.

From a corporate standpoint, these findings support the changes that have taken place over the past five years regarding the secretarial position. In a recent survey of Fortune 500 companies, 93 percent agreed that the role of the secretary is different than it was five years ago, with more than half acknowledging a significant increase in the secretary's level of administrative responsibility.

"Opportunities for advancement are growing for secretaries, so it's not surprising that our students prefer a title that reflects the dramatic changes in the responsibilities and duties of today's secretary," says Eleanor P. Vreeland, president and CEO of Katharine Gibbs School. "Students at Gibbs not only learn the traditional secretarial functions such as typing and shorthand, but they also develop professional business skills such as accounting, business law, office procedures, and business communications."

Bosses can salute secretaries uniquely

Bosses, forget the candy and flowers to celebrate National Secretaries Day this year. Instead, take your secretary to dine with more than 75 area celebrities at the 2nd annual All-Star Salute to Secretaries luncheon, Wednesday, April 22, 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Marriott Hotel Copley Place. Proceeds benefit the Arthritis Foundation's Massachusetts Chapter.

The luncheon begins with a reception at which secretaries and celebrities exchange autographs and bid in a silent auction of celebrity-donated items. At the luncheon, WBZ-TV's Jack Williams hosts an All-Star auction of special items donated by area businesses such as gift certificates for weekends at deluxe hotels, vacation trips, sailplane rides, limo service, catered dinners and much more. Celebrities rotate tables for different courses of the luncheon so everyone gets an opportunity to meet.

Master of ceremonies Matt Siegel of WXKS-FM (KISS 108) and New England Patriots general manager Pat Sullivan, are co-chairman of the Celebrity Committee for the luncheon.

Tickets are $35 per person; businesses can sponsor a table of 10 for $350.

Arthritis is our nation's number one crippling disease, affecting one in seven people of all ages. Founded in 1948, the Arthritis Foundation is the only voluntary health agency seeking a total answer to arthritis — cause, prevention and cure. The Foundation supports patient services, public and professional education and research.

Scholarship program for voke school

The Joint Apprentice and Training Committee for the Electrical Contracting Industry of Greater Boston recently announced a Union Scholarship Program for vocational schools. Each school will nominate a graduating electrical department student for the scholarship. Exceptional grades and attendance over the four year Voc Ed program, and faculty and school director recommendations will qualify the students for the Joint Apprentice and Training Committee final selection.

Each student selected will receive: acceptance as a formal Apprentice into the Electrician's Apprenticeship Program. Wages and step rate increases under the program as approved by the Commonwealth and the Federal Bureau of Apprenticeship Training, and acceptance into the Electrician's Union Local 103 IBEW. The value of each Union Scholarship is estimated at $16,000.

The Center for Industrial Policy and Occupational Education at UMass Boston is coordinating the new program with the Greater Boston area Voc Ed schools.

Applications are to be submitted by April 15, 1987. Interested Voc Tech students who would like to receive more information should contact their electrical instructor or advisor.
